NFU's Carpenter criticizes 'extremes' in U.S. ag policy

BY JAMES H. EVERHART

HERSHEY — Farmers in this country are in trouble because the United States really doesn't have an agricultural policy, National Farmers Union President Cy Carpenter said here this week.

"We don't have an agricultural policy because we go from extreme to extreme," Carpenter told several hundred delegates to the Pennsylvania Farmers Union convention at the Hotel Hershey here.

That policy of mistakes and overreaction, he says, began during World War II when we needed all the food we could produce. It continued in the post-war years and through the 1960s and 1970s, as we helped other countries develop agricultural capacity, while encouraging our own farmers to plant fencerow to fencerow.

Many of those countries we helped to develop are now our competitors in international grain and soybean markets, Carpenter said. Yet our policies are still tied to the past.

"Now they want to bring the price down to recapture those markets," he said. "And those markets don't exist any more."

China, once described as an "endless market" for our grain, is now a grain exporter, he noted. And another hungry giant, India, is now agriculturally self-sufficient, he said.

"They want us to drive out our competitors with low price," Carpenter said. "That isn't policy, that's idiocy."

Our attempts to force our way back into those markets, he said, will only increase world frictions, and probably won't succeed in any case.

"We're causing confrontation instead of understanding," he concluded. "We've got to have better direction than that."

The Farm Bill proposals currently being debated in Washington, he said, are "absolutely inadequate" attempts to revise the current policy.

"There is nothing in that legislation that will keep farmers in business," he said.

And farmers won't receive adequate relief unless they force Congress to act by making sure the public understands the depth of the problem.

"Our system of agriculture is terminal," he said, "and we need to say it is. We have to admit that we are not going to get out of this situation . . . and the public is in it with us."

Currently, he noted, total farm debt is $215 billion, significantly more than can be serviced with farm income at current levels.

"That $215 billion is going to have to be written down," he said. "It's no longer a farm problem, it's spread to the financial community."

Small banks, like individual farmers, he said, went out of business without causing much of a stir.

"But when it hit the Farm Credit System," he said, "they said, 'Wait a minute'"

NFU, he said, currently opposes any form of aid to the Farm Credit System, even though it is "one of the best lending institutions in the world."

An aid package now, he said, would not help Farm Credit unless action was made to improve net farm income levels.

"If you don't improve the repayment capability of the farmers who've borrowed from the Farm Credit System," he said, "you don't help the system at all."

And while Farm Credit has been a good lending institution, he said, it's also been a good investment. And his group contends the current package is designed to help the investors in Farm Credit more than the farmers.

"Why bail out the investor and let the farmer sit with the problem?" he said.

Farm income can be restored, he said, through a system of production controls, which will allow prices to rise to more appropriate levels.

Cy Carpenter, President of the National Farmers Union, makes a point at the Pennsylvania Farmers Union annual convention in Hershey this week.

Philadelphia Eggs

Thursday, Nov. 7
Report supplied by USDA

Market Comment: Prices unchanged. Trade sentiment generally fully steady on large and heavier sizes, cautious on the lighter weights. Cartoned egg demand was fairly good at many parts with lightly scattered retail promotional activity adding to movement in a few quarters. Graded stocks were at least adequate on all sizes and additional product was generally available. Most traders were holding stocks with confidence for the upcoming holiday period and planned features but reports of discounted graded product and increased offerings into breaker channels were noted by several dealers. Nest run offerings were adequate for most packer needs.

Prices to retailers: sales to volume buyers, consumer grades white eggs in cartons delivered store door:

NOW IS THE TIME

By Jay Irwin

To Appreciate Farm-City Week

Each farmer is a very important person. While we have fewer farmers than ever before, the growing population demands more food. Never have so many persons been so dependent on so few.

Farm-City Week is being observed Nov. 22 through 28 to bring a better understanding of problems existing between the rural and urban segments of our society. Some people may think that agriculture is a diminishing industry, but this is not true. There are fewer farmers but each farmer is now producing enough food to feed 80 people. In Russia that ratio is one to nine.

Over one-fifth of the state's work force is employed in agricultural related non-manufacturing wholesale and retail trades. Even more workers are employed in the industries providing seed, feed, fertilizer and other supplies used in farm production. We urge you to take part in Farm-City Week events.

To Exercise Dairy Cows

I know that many of our dairy farmers keep their milking cows confined to the stall barns much of the time. This is easy to do when you are short of labor during the winter months. In order to have a healthy herd, the cows should be allowed outside to exercise daily unless severe weather conditions exist. The exercise will not only keep their feet and legs in better condition, but will permit the cows in heat to be detected; this is often a problem when cows are kept confined too much of the time.

If the herd is turned out for 15 to 30 minutes each day, the time involved will be very worthwhile. You'll find very few days when the weather will interfere.

To Check Fire Extinguishers

This is the time of year that our barns and other buildings are filled to capacity with hay, straw, grain and machinery. We want to make certain that fire extinguishers are mounted in each building, including your home.

The first step is to have the extinguishers; the second step is to be sure they are in good working condition; the third step is to be sure that all members of the work force and family know where they are located and how to operate them. In many cases a good fire extinguisher can help control a fire until the fire company arrives. And finally, be sure they are checked and filled with the proper chemical.

To Adopt Winter Driving Habits

The hazards of winter driving are many, and drivers should change their habits when roads become icy or snow covered. Most importantly, be patient, reduce your speed, and allow more time for breaking the car or truck. Winter or all season tires should be mounted soon to give extra protection. Batteries should also be checked and kept in top condition. We must be aware that cold weather puts extra stress on all parts of the car. Always be alert to recognize road conditions and drive accordingly.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

By LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU CHARISMATIC?

November 10, 1985

Background Scripture:
1 Corinthians 12 through 13.
Devotional Reading:
Romans 12:1-13.

Knowing of my interest and involvement in the ministry of spiritual healing, the newspaper reporter said, "Are you a charismatic?"

My first impulse was to reply in the negative. I realized that he assumed only member of the "charismatic movement" are interested in the healing ministry of the church–a wrong but understandable assumption. But I decided the time had come for someone to try to put the controversy over the "gifts of the Spirit" in a different perspective.

EXCEPT BY THE HOLY SPIRIT

"The answer to your question is both 'yes' and 'no'," I replied. "I am charismatic, and, if you're a Christian so are you, but that doesn't mean that we are necessarily part of what is known today as the charismatic movement." I went on to say that, while I have no quarrel with that movement, I have not been attracted to become part of it.

My quarrel, I said, is with those who use the issue of the gifts of the Holy Spirit to divide and antagonize Christians. The Holy Spirit is not the special or unique possession of one particular group of Christians, nor are the gifts of the Spirit limited to people following one Christian lifestyle. All of us have the Holy Spirit within us and all of us are granted gifts by the Spirit, although we may not be aware of them or make use of them.

Today, however, it is customary for some Christians insist that they alone "possess the Holy Spirit and are endowed with the gifts of the Spirit. Even more arrogantly, some of these further hold that when the rest of us preach, teach or heal in Christ's name, we are endowed not by the Holy Spirit, but the devil. Remember that the same charge was made against Jesus (Matthew 12:24).

BUT THE SAME SPIRIT

Thus in I Corinthians 12, 13 and 14, Paul deals with the same problem. Some people in Corinth are claiming that they alone have the gifts of God's Spirit while others are empowered by the power of Satan. Paul says it plainly: "I want you to understand that no one speaking by the Spirit of God ever says 'Jesus be cursed!' and no one can say 'Jesus is Lord' except by the Holy Spirit. Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same Spirit; and there are varieties of service, but the same Lord" (I Cor. 13:3,4).

Paul goes on to say that the gifts of the Spirit without love–love that is not jealous or boastful, love that does not insist on its own way–are worthless. Thus, if we have the Holy Spirit in us, we will be humble, not proud, loving of others, not contentious, and willing to acknowledge that all of God's children are gifted with the charisma of the one Spirit.

'Resusci-dog' mannequin saves lives of real canines

ITHACA, NY — Veterinary students at Cornell University are now able to practice cardiac pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) on a cat without endangering any of its nine lives. The willing subject's fur may be soft and its teeth sharp, but its heart is electronic and its lungs are made of plastic.

Known as "Resusci-cat," the lifeless mannequin is the newest member of a growing family of electronic animal dummies developed at the New York State College of Veterinary Medicine at Cornell by Dr. Charles Short. "Using electronic mannequins is only one of the ways the vet college has approached reducing the use of animals," explains Dr. Fred Quimby, a veterinarian and director of the Center for Research Animal Resources at Cornell.

Resusci-cat and Resusci-dog, for example, are providing future veterinarians with life-saving skills while at the same time reducing the number of live animals used in classrooms.

In the past, the only way to provide students with similar training was to induce cardiac failure in living laboratory dogs. Quimby believes Resusci-dog, which was invented in 1983, has already saved hundreds of canine lives.

Complete with pulses, the dummies look like real animals, only a little on the stiff side. Protruding from Resusci-dog's brown shaggy fur and from Resusci-cat's black coat are small groups of wires and tubes. Most of them lead to a box the size of a transistor radio that one might take to a beach, only instead of a dial it displays a line of multi colored lights.

The lights indicate whether one is applying the right pressure, providing sufficient air to the lungs, or even squeezing the correct place on the body. For example, if one presses too hard or inflates the lungs at the wrong moment, a red error light comes on and a sharp electronic beep rings out.

The mannequins are most useful in developing the right touch in students, Short says. It is easy, he explains, to apply too much pressure on a small cat and too little on a 1,000-pound horse. Students benefit from having the chance to practice their CPR skills on the mannequins before facing their first clinical case, Short says. Using the dummies, the students learn to insert breathing tubes, practice inflating the lungs, and apply pressure to the chest.

Over the past decade, audiovisual aids have also replaced the use of animals in many courses at Cornell's veterinary medicine college. Most striking is the sharp reduction in the use of animals in classroom settings. Of the 142 courses offered in anatomy, clinical sciences, pathology, preventive medicine, and other subjects at the college, only 21 courses use living animals. Ten years ago, many more courses made use of living animals, Quimby says.

In certain departments, such as pharmacology and preventive medicine, attempts have been made over the past decade to eliminate the use of living animals in teaching, except for clinical cases, Quimby says. Case studies from previous work, statistical programs, mathematical models, motion pictures, and in vitro assays, have taken the place of animals in these courses.

The most frequent substitute for animals is films. The college maintains a collection of more than 500 audiovisuals of operations, treatment techniques, and illness symptoms that previously could be demonstrated to students only by using live animals.

There are, however, instances where one cannot rely on films or videotapes. Some surgical techniques, such as intestinal anastomosis and thoractomy, cannot be taught properly by film alone. In those cases, Quimby says, laboratory animals are anesthetized for the operation.

Each animal is used for only one major surgical procedure, and after its recovery from anesthesia, the animal is closely monitored by students and veterinary staff and treated with pain-relieving drugs, if necessary. Once the animals are submitted to euthanasia, their bodies may be used in the anatomy laboratory for dissection.

Improvements in equipment and scientific advances, such as the ability to manufacture synthetic proteins, have also reduced the number of animals used in research at Cornell.

In vitro assays, for example, now permit thousands of tests to be conducted using only a small tissue sample from just one animal. Procedures that may have previously required the death of animals can now be conducted with such samples, he says.

"A combination of an explosion in knowledge, scientific advances, and an increasing sensitivity on the part of researchers, teachers, and students have, in only a matter of years, substantially changed the role of animals in research," Quimby adds.

ASA says FAIR would aid farmers

ST. LOUIS, MO. — U.S. soybean farmer income would be significantly higher in each of the next five years under the proposed Farm Acreage Income Restitution (FAIR) program according to an econometric study just completed by the Research Department of Clayton Brokerage. The American Soybean Association (ASA) is urging Congress to adopt FAIR, for soybeans only in the 1985 Farm Bill.

The FAIR program calls for a $50 per acre payment in return for a reduced soybean loan. In the early years of the program, direct government payments to farmers offset lower market clearing prices, while in later years, higher income results from higher market prices.

According to the study, a farmer producing average soybean yields would receive $38 per acre more under ASA's FAIR plan. Combined income from market price and the $50 per acre payment would average $212 per acre under the FAIR program. By contrast, the proposed U.S. House farm bill would earn $174 per acre for soybean farmers.

"The study shows the FAIR plan increases soybean farm income while addressing the real problem facing U.S. soybeans--lack of price competitiveness in the world market," says Dennis Sharpe, ASA Staff Vice President for Economic Analysis. "The FAIR plan gives soybean farmers transitional income support while allowing soybean prices to seek levels that discourage expanded foreign production and reduce burdensome soybean surpluses."

The study also shows a significant savings to the U.S. government by reducing forfeitures of soybeans to the CCC. At the current higher loan rate, the government may assume control of a record number of bushels of soybeans. And even more would be acquired in future years as farmers opt for the loan rather than low market prices.

Soybean Association leaders are using the study in an effort to convince the Senate to adopt the FAIR plan in the 1985 Farm Bill.

Compare the production and feed efficiency of the Hisex White and Hisex Brown layers and you won't find any better, anywhere. And that is a condition that will continue since Hisex research and development keeps improving the breed.

But mere test figures don't tell the whole story. The fact is that good henhouse managers can beat these figures. Hisex field testing has proven that. You may well obtain better feed conversion, mortality, and higher production.

As in all things, you must start with a good, basic product. The good genes, in other words.

See for yourself. Put these great birds to work for you soon. You'll find their average performance produces above average results.

Erickson reelected to Grange board

WARREN — Jesse Erickson of Erie County has been re-elected Wednesday to a four-year term on the State Grange Executive Committee.

Erickson, a fruit farmer, was first appointed to fill an unexpired term on the state committee in 1980 and was elected to his first full term the following year. Before that, he served on the State Grange legislative committee, and he has held the position of Erie County Pomona master, state deputy, Elk Creek Grange master, and local and county legislative chairman. The retired rural mail carrier continues to farm and has served on various committees for Welch's Grape growers.

In other action of The State Grange's annual convention here, delegates developed a dairy policy that calls for surplus milk production problems to be addressed on a regional basis and for dairy imports to be assessed 15 cents per hundred pounds for the National Dairy Promotion Program the same as all domestic milk. Delegates opposed the use of growth hormones in dairy cattle until tested more extensively and supported regulations to bar growth hormones in dairy cattle until the drugs are proven safe for use in the United States.

The Grange also adopted policy requiring reimbursement to be paid to farmers whose sheep or other livestock are killed by coyotes through the Dog Law Fund with contributions to the Fund by the Pennsylvania Game Commission. Any future hunting license fee increases should include provisions for crop damage payments, delegates said.

In non-farm action, delegates approved continuation of the Catastrophic Loss Trust Fund to be administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation and opposed equal automobile insurance for men and women. The organization supported a plan for federal income tax simplification but opposed provisions to do away with exemptions for local and state taxes.

Horticultural Society plans greenhouse session

NEWARK, Del. — A greenhouse-nursery session, part of the annual meeting of the Peninsula Horticultural Society, will be held Nov. 12 at the Salisbury Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury.

The session, which will run from 9:15 a.m. to 2:45 p.m., is designed for all growers, producers and marketers of commercial nursery crops on the peninsula.

The morning session will include updates on disease, insect, and pesticide regulations, plus reports on scheduling crops for maximum greenhouse utilization, tissue culture advances and techniques for displays in garden centers.

The afternoon half of the program will cover new developments in greenhouse and nursery equipment, herbicide use in nursery plantings and post-rooting care of hardwood cuttings.

Almquist receives honor

HERSHEY — John O. Almquist, professor emeritus of dairy physiology at The Pennsylvania State University has received the "Service to American Agriculture Award" from the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Dr. Almquist is the first person to receive the award, which honors significant contributions to American or world agriculture. He was selected because of his work with artificial insemination, which is the most important single contribution to genetic improvement in the history of animal science.

In accepting the award Dr. Almquist noted recent advances in gene splicing and the research efforts in progress on genetic engineering, dissection of embryos and cloning. "We are on the threshold of using genetic engineering techniques to increase production of milk and meat in each animnal", he told an audience of more than 1,000 agricultural agents from 49 states.

The county agricultural agent has always been an important link between the researcher and the producer, translating and applying findings. This role will become even more critical in the years ahead, Almquist said.

In 1981, Almquist received the highest award in agriculture when he received the international Wolfe Prize for his contributions to livestock improvement.

The National Association of County Agricultural Agents is holding its 70th annual meeting at Hershey through Friday. The week long series of professional improvement sessions, workshops and agricultural tours is focusing on current issues in agriculture.

Production credit leader addresses Adams County Holstein breeders

YORK SPRINGS – "Low farm income and high interest rates have combined to produce the current net farm income crisis." This is the situation confronting farmers as viewed by Donald Wilkinson, president of the Federal Farm Credit Administration. His ideas were passed along to Adams County dairymen by Robert Stover, retired general manager of the York Production Credit Association, at the 34th annual meeting of the Adams County Holstein Association on Oct. 24, at the York Springs Firehall.

"The purchase of the bulk tank for on-farm milk storage started a chain expansion in the dairy business," said Stover. He pointed to this purchase leading to the decision to expand the herd and the barn to generate more income and this in turn leading to debt expansion and record milk production.

Stover urged his listeners to do more to develop a market: "If you can't sell it, don't produce it." He encouraged the dairymen to attend educational meetings, to listen, and to apply what is learned. Finally, he recommended, avoid discouragement and cultivate friendship.

Stover was introduced by David Kehr, Littlestown, president of the county Holstein association. Kehr conducted the business meeting in which Robert Clowney, Gettysburg, Russell Redding, Gettysburg, and Paul Waybright, Gettysburg, were elected to the board of directors of the association.

Jennie Hess, Adams County dairy princess, presented a skit promoting dairy products and announced that she is available to present programs to local clubs and organizations.

Sandra Flickinger provided background information on a newly formed milk promotion committee and invited interested persons to attend the committee's next meeting on Wednesday, Nov. 6, at 7:30 p.m. in the Penn State Extension Office, Adams County Services Building, Gettysburg.

Speaking for the Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Kenneth Raney annoucned that a discount on membership renewal would be in effect until December 1. A new state publication, to be titled "Pennsylvania Holstein Profiles" will reach members in January 1986.

The state Holstein convention will be held February 21, 22, 1986, at the Sheraton Inn, Pittsburgh, said Raney. He also invited the local dairymen to attend the Nittany Lion Fall Classic sale, offering 60 head of registered Holsteins on Friday, Nov. 8, at the Ag Arena on the main campus of

On recommendation of retiring state director Marvin Brown, Littlestown, Daniel Waybright, Gettysburg, was installed to represent the county association on the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

Adam Lobaugh, Aspers, was named vice-president of the county association, replacing Robert Flickinger, New Oxford. He joins the following officers who were reelected to another term: David Kehr, Littlestown, president; Vincent Lobaugh, Aspers, secretary; and Michael Todt, Hanover, treasurer.

Joining the board as newly elected directors were Russell Redding, Gettysburg, and Paul Waybright, Gettysburg. Robert Clowney, Gettysburg, was reelected.

Robert Clowney, chairman of the junior activities committee, presented milk and fat production awards to Jenny Weimer, county winner, and to the following participants: Josie, Jayne and John R. Hess; Carol Clowney; Christine and Kathleen Todt.

He introduced Jennie Hess as a member of the state 4-H dairy judging team who placed 19th in the national contest held in September during the World Dairy Exposition in Madison, Wis. The county Holstein association contributed $100 toward travel expenses.

County Extension Director Thomas E. Piper concluded the program by showing a series of color slides reviewing participation in educational meetings, the 4-H dairy program, and the summer tour to dairy farms in Juniata County.

Agents honor Macialek

UNIVERSITY PARK, PA — Joseph Macialek, a regional Penn State Cooperative Extension community development agent based in Lackawanna County, received a Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Macialek was honored for his innovative community programs on the disposal and agricultural use of sewage sludge and a variety of other programs of concern to rural communities. He has served as an extension agent for 28 years.

As a result of his presentations on the uses of sewage sludge in Lackawanna County, a local engineering firm serving several sewage plants obtained agricultural utilization permits. Sludge in these areas is now used in crop production. In Schuylkill County presentations on sewage enabled a local treatment plant to receive permission to use sludge for mine reclamation.

Because septic disposal has been a problem throughout northeast Pennsylvania, Macialek proposed and assisted in developing a statewide conference on the subject for the septic industry. He also has worked with the Lake Wallenpaupack Watershed Management District on ways to reduce lake pollution through alternative septage disposal systems.

Macialek has met with local government officials in three counties on the impact of timesharing properties. He has organized a workshop for extension agents, planners and consultants on performance zoning, which regulates land uses according to potantial impact rather than by category.

Agricultural preservation has been a big issue in the Northeast. As a result of Macialek's efforts in five counties, agricultural preservation districts have been established in five areas and are now being collected to establish two more. He has also been active developing materials and presentations on gas and oil leases, which protect landowner rights.

Macialek initiated 4-H Local Government Day Program, which has been conducted each year since 1975. 4-H'ers participate by representing a variety of government roles in a predetermined issue, learning the responsibilities of various government agencies and offices.

A Penn State graduate, Macialek holds a bachelor of science degree and a master of education degree. He also has done graduate work at the University of New Hampshire, Michigan State University, University of Minnesota, and Cornell University. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and National Association of County Agricultural Agents and served as a director from 1980 to 1981 and as chairman of the extension programs committee from 1983 to 1984.

Van Houtens truck Pa. produce to New York City

BY BARBARA MILLER
Staff Correspondent

MANHATTAN – On a recent Saturday morning a street light in Manhattan at the corner of Union Square Park kept blinking on and off. It couldn't seem to decide whether daylight had arrived or not. But at 7 a.m. there was little doubt of the approaching day in the minds of 40 or so produce farmers busily setting up their stands in the square.

Among those hustling to ready their stand were the Van Houtens of Orangeville, Pa. and Pearl River, N.Y. They are one of the largest produce farmers at Greenmarket and also one of the few who truck produce from Pennsylvania.

The Van Houten operation is a family enterprise run by Jim Van Houten Sr. and his sons, Jimmy Jr. and Bobby. Jim Sr. and Bobby, who live near Orangeville, share management of the Pennsylvania operation, while Jimmy Jr., who lives in Pearl River, N.Y., is in charge of things on the New York side. Jim Jr. is a graduate of Cornell University with degrees in agriculture and business.

With the recent death of Jim Sr.'s wife, Kay, the family lost a loved one who was an energetic and driving force in their business.

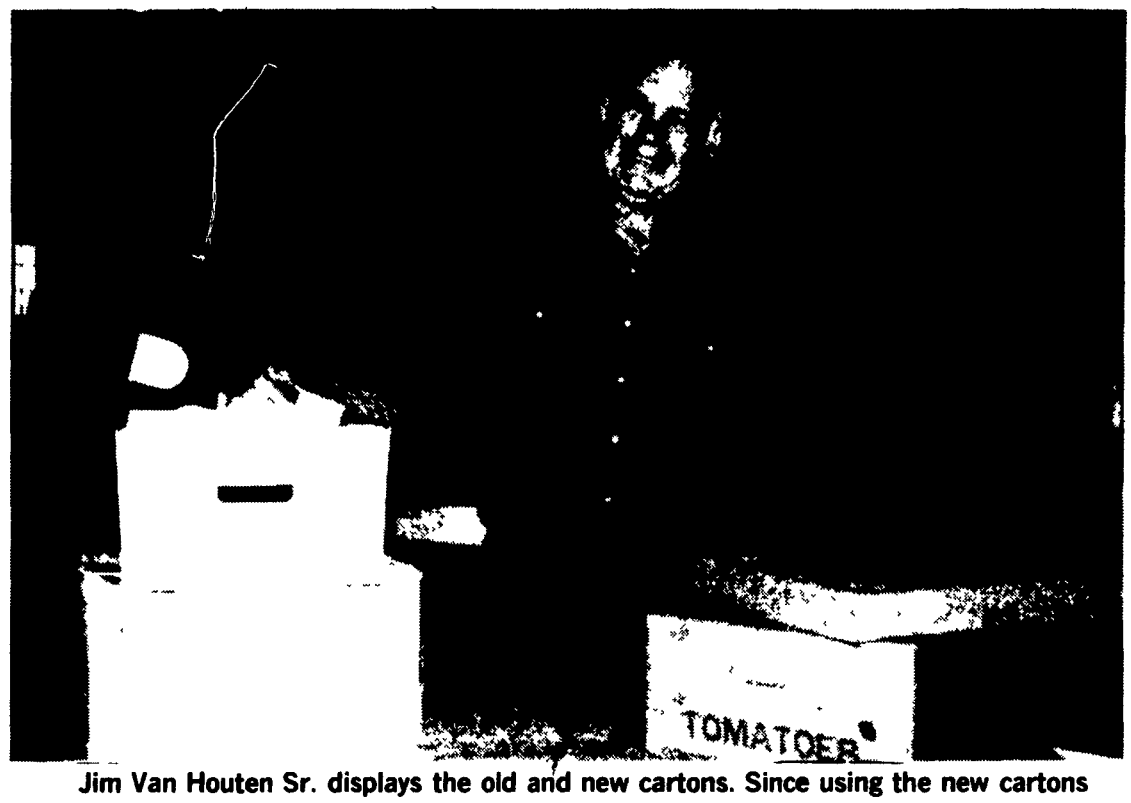
The Van Houtens farm 1200 acres at their Orangeville location and for nine years have been trucking produce to New York City. The family sells produce an average of seven times per week at various Greenmarket locations throughout the city.

The Van Houtens first sold produce from their Pearl River farm located just 30 miles from New York City. Strangely enough, according to Bobby's wife, Ann, in this case it was the younger generation who enticed their parents into business. At the time, Jim Sr. and Kay Van Houten ran a dairy farm at Pearl River and operated their own milk route.

Bobby says Jimmy and he were about six and seven years of age when they set up their first "produce stand."

"We had a card table," Bobby recalls, "and sold strawberries from dad's garden. The first year we made $400 and bought a TV set."

And the second year, Bobby says, they made enough to purchase their mother her first automatic washer. After that, business snowballed until eventually, a carpenter who owed their dad money for milk built the boys a stand.



Jim Van Houten Sr. displays the old and new cartons. Since using the new cartons with the farms address and phone number, they have gained some new wholesale customers.

After a few years, Bobby says, "the vegetables were paying debts the cows got us into. So the cows went, and the vegetables stayed."

Before Jim Sr. started dairy farming, Bobby observes, he was discharged from military services with a 100 percent disability due to polio. It took his father four years on the farm before he could use his hands well enough to "strip" a cow.

Although his parents made little money during the 18 years they operated the dairy farm, Bobby said, it was through the physical demands of farming and determination that Jim Sr. gradually regained his health.

In 1970 the Van Houtens purchased the Orangeville farm and a little later bought another near Benton, Pa. This brought their total owned land to 600 acres.

For seven generations the farm at Pearl River has been in the Van Houten family. Although portions have been taken for a highway and a reservoir, the produce market still stands along with a terminal where produce is stored until it is trucked to the city. Without the terminal, Ann says, it wouldn't be feasible to transport their vegetables to New York City

"From that point on," Ann sighs, "our major headache has been transportation."

The Van Houtens use more than 30 vehicles, including pickups, tractor trailers, and a specially made goose-necked refrigerated trailer to transport produce to market.

For the past eight years, Ann, who has an art degree, has been taking produce to market, driving anything from a car to a 25-foot produce truck.

On a typical Saturday morning Ann and her 14-year-old son Justin leave Orangeville at 3 a.m., making the 170-mile trip to the Union Square Greenmarket by 7 a.m. Sometimes it is midnight before they return to Orangeville.

Along the way Ann is in constant communication via her CB radio with other truckers, giving and receiving information concerning traffic and weather conditions. Ann enjoys her role as trucker and takes pleasure in operating the market stand. She likes chatting with the people, some of whom have become friends over the years.

By the time Ann and Justin arrive at the market, Jimmy Jr. and his crew of five or six men from Pearl River have already begun setting up the stands. Encompassed by 20 story buildings, they put into place nine 6-by 4-foot tables, hang a dozen pair of scales for weighing produce, set up tarps and umbrellas and the meat counters, and lastly, put out the vegetables.

And the day begins. Customers who have been patiently waiting for the meat stand to open enjoy the scent of smoked meat mingled with fresh basil from a nearby stand.

What is Greenmarket?

Greenmarket, notes Becky Smyth, market manager, is one of several programs run by the Council on the Environment in New York City, a privately funded, non-profit citizen's organization.

The first Greenmarket was created in 1976. There are currently 18 Greenmarkets located in Manhattan and the Bronx where more than 120 farmers from New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania come to sell their own homegrown produce.

The purpose of the Greenmarket is to "Improve the variety, freshness, taste and nutritional value of fresh fruits and vegetables available in the city, support agriculture, conserve farmland in the region and breathe vitality into city neighborhoods."

According to Ms. Smyth, from 18,000 to 20,000 people visit Union Square Greenmarket on an average midseason Saturday, making it a lucrative outlet for produce farmers. The Greenmarkets are noted for their fresh produce and for the variety of produce they offer which is not to be found even in New York stores.

Ms. Smyth says she's seen very rare old varieties of apples, Romanesco broccoli ("It's an old Italian variety," she says. "All points — looks like it came from the moon"), a rare Calabasa squash, and Japanese turnips which she describes as looking like white radishes.

September and October, Ms. Smyth reports, are the busiest months, and not particularly because they are the main harvest times. The reason, she says, is because, "people are coming back from vacation. They start going to school and the weather cools off and they start cooking."

A curious controversy is raging in Manhattan concerning the existence of the Union Square market. The parks commissioner recently decided to renovate Union Square Park, allowing little or no space in the plans for the current Greenmarket. Whether or not New Yorkers, traditionally supportive of the Greenmarkets, will let them disappear has yet to be determined.

Farm Credit not alone in ag financial crisis

BY KATHY GILL
Special Correspondent

HARRISBURG – "It's important to note that all agricultural lenders have a problem, not just the Farm Credit System," commented George Irwin, economist and deputy governor, Farm Credit Administration.

Irwin, speaking at a Pennsylvania Food and Agricultural Council meeting here recently, said that the changed economic policies under the Reagan Administration triggered today's agricultural credit crunch.

He defended economic projections, which missed the downturn in mid-western land values, by saying that these economic changes "were difficult to forecast."

Nevertheless, a "tight money policy with little fiscal policy" which lowered interest rates and increased the value of the dollar abroad led to today's hard times for agriculture.

As an agricultural sector, Irwin said agriculture "uses a lot of debt and is one industry most dependent upon exports."

Moreover, economic policies which lowered inflation for all Americans–coupled with poor agricultural exports–have led some states to a 45 percent decrease in farm land values over the last four years.

The result has been a credit crunch that has crippled mid-western farmers and sent shocks throughout the agricultural lending system. Speaking specifically about the Farm Credit System, Irwin said that most of the total loss that has occurred in the past 50 years came in the last three.

But Farm Credit is not the only lender subject to pressures from ag sector problems.

Farm Credit, though its Federal Land Bank Associations, has 40 percent of the mortgage or long-term loan market. Thirty percent is held by sellers of farm land and the Farmers Home Administration, commercial banks and insurance companies share third place with about 10 percent each.

Short-term loans, on the other hand, are held primarily by commercial banks, with 40 percent of the market. The Farm Credit System's Production Credit Associations have 20 percent, followed by FmHA and suppliers.

The Baltimore District, Irwin said, is doing much better than some other Farm Credit districts. He credits the stability in the northeast to diversified agriculture and dependence on dairy.

System-wide, Farm Credit sustained losses of $42 million in the first quarter of 1985, compared to $16 million for the first quarter of 1984, according to the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

Despite the gloomy figures, Irwin said that only 15 percent of all US farmers are in a "non-viable" situation. That's banker talk for hopeless.

Elmer Hawbaker, Farmers Home Administration, said that the delinquency rate on FmHA loans in Pennsylvania is much lower than the national average–18 percent versus 31 percent.

Irwin said that major California banks, such as Bank of America, are also suffering losses. "However, its agricultural accounts are only four percent of its outstanding loans."

He said that federal legislators insist that the banks must "do their part" before Congress will step in. He contends that lenders have done just that in writing off more than $1 billion.

The solution? "We need to stabilize land prices," Irwin said. Fifteen percent of farmers are in a "non-viable" position. They hold nine percent of all agricultural assets. "Assuming this were all land, that means four times the usual rate of land" would come into the market should lenders foreclose.

"The price would swing too much," Irwin said.

"We must focus on getting the farmer stabilized. Credit stabilization will be a by-product," he concluded.

The Farm Credit System, through the Farm Credit Council, is proposing a plan to do just that. Called the Agricultural Conservation Corporation (ACC), its goal is land price stabilization. There is an urgent need to provide distressed farmers with a market for their land; putting a floor on deteriorating land prices benefits all farmers, and, ultimately, all consumers.

Farm land prices were inflated in the '70s due to strong exports and speculative investments. Because liquid assets were depreciating rapidly as a result of high inflation, investors turned to fixed assets, from gold to silver to houses and farm land.

Today's lower inflation has made land a less attractive investment. And declining exports have eroded the farmer's net income, and by extension, the farmer's ability to repay loans.

PFU officials recognized

HERSHEY – Pennsylvania Farmers Union President M. James Brown and Vice President Barbara E. Woods were each presented an award for their dedicated service to the farm organization during their terms in office. The awards were presented by Executive Director Chester L. Reed at a ceremony during PFU's 14th Annual Convention at the Hotel Hershey.

Both Brown and Woods completed their second terms of office this year. Chester L. Reed, Executive Director, praised the pair of "countless hours spent going anywhere, anytime to promote the cause of family farming."

"Their knowledge, leadership and enthusiasm have helped this organization grow," Reed continued. "We will miss them very much."

After receiving his B.S. degree, Reece spent three years working for the North Carolina Extension Service, becoming familiar with many Jersey breeders and Jersey programs.

Three $650 William A. Russell Scholarships were awarded this year to: Lisa M. Pilipauskis, Meadville, Pa.; Kimberly A. Seuferer, Chariton, Iowa; and Sondra J. Stern, Highland, Md.

Pilipauskis, daughter of David and Donna Reusing, is a freshman at Virginia Polytechnic Institute majoring in business management and accounting. The funds to make these scholarships available have been donated by Jersey breeders nationwide to honor the member of former Jersey leaders. The recipients were honored at the All American Junior Banquet and Fun Fest in Louisville, Ky. on November 9.

Ethanol demand boosts corn value

ST. LOUIS — Additional demand for corn to produce ethanol is resulting in an almost 10 cent increase in the value of a bushel of corn, according to a new study released today by the Indiana Corn Growers Association.

The study researched by Professor John R. Umbeck of Purdue University's Krannert School of Management shows positive results for American farmers and the U.S. Government from corn growers' efforts to expand the domestic fuel ethanol market.

Over 220 million bushels of corn currently refined for fuel ethanol has contributed 9.9 cents to the value of the bushel of corn, thereby increasing the value of the 1985 corn crop by $849 million.

Even after subtracting the cost of government incentives for the ethanol industry, there is a "net savings to the federal government of over $227 million in agricultural support costs," according to the study.

"Current livestock and export demand for corn is static at best, but domestic ethanol production has tremendous near and long-term growth potential and benefits the farmer as well as the government," says ICGA President Alan Kemper, Lafayette, Indiana.

"This study proves farmers can help themselves. Successful market develop not only improves farm income, but actually saves taxpayer dollars," says Kemper.

Dain Friend, president of the National Corn Growers Association from Warrensburg, Illinois, says the study exemplifies corn growers' initiative to help themselves. "The blending of gasoline and ethanol originated in Rural America. This study demonstrates that corn growers' investments in the development of the fuel ethanol market are paying big dividends."

Friend estimated since 1978, when gasoline-ethanol blending was introduced, state and national corn growers associations have invested three-quarters of a million dollars of their own money to develop the market.

"This is an example of our only long-term solution," Friend says, "selling more of our product to new markets."

Elizabethtown FFA is a silver award winner in the National Chapter Safety category.

Three teachers will receive the honorary American Farmer Degree: Stephen Kline of Beaver Springs, Guy Naugle of Red Lion and Clair Zerby, Westfield. Other honorary American Farmer degrees will be conferred upon T. Dean Witmer, a vo-ag services manager with the Department of Education; Guy Eberhart, public affairs director for Sears, Roebuck and Co.; and Donald E. Evans, Penn State's assistant director of administration.

FFA'ers Lisa Hileman of Adamstown and Carol Dreisbach, Hamburg, will be members of the National Band, and April Jeffries of Amity will participate in National chorus.

Each state may be represented in any of the 13 national contests featured during the convention. Following is a list of the contests in which Keystone State FFA'ers will participate.

Dairy — Contestants must evaluate six classes of dairy animals and give reasons for their placings. The Tulpehocken Area FFA of Bernville will compete.

Meats — Elizabethtown FFA will compete, judging beef, pork and lamb carcasses, and identifying cuts of meat.

Livestock — Elverson's Twin Valley Chapter will participate. Beef cattle, swine and sheep are judged on-hoof, and oral reasons for placings are given.

Dairy Foods — Ephrata's Cloister FFA will test its knowledge of dairy production, processing, distribution, promotion and marketing of dairy products.

Agricultural Mechanics — The students' knowledge of everything from soil and water management to agricultural structures and machinery will be tested. Reynolds FFA of Greenville will compete.

Floraculture — The contest consists of 10 tests that demonstrate members' work skills. Cumberland-Perry FFA of Mechanicsburg will participate.

Poultry — Penn Manor FFA of Millersville will test its knowledge of poultry and poultry products.

Farm Business Management — The contest evaluates participants' ability to solve agriculture and agribusiness problems. Garden Spot FFA of New Holland will compete.

Forestry — Tree and equipment identification, as well as other forestry skills are tested. Participating will be the Somerset County FFA.

Nursery-Landscape — Members must identify plant materials and judge plants. Lancaster County chapter of Willow Street will compete.

The convention will also feature the election of six national officers to represent the FFA for one year.

This year's convention theme is "FFA...Leaders for the New Fields of Agriculture." National FFA executive secretary Coleman Harris points out that, "Agriculture is more than just the planting and harvesting of a seed. It's a very science and business-oriented industry. It also involves high-tech procedures of processing, manufacturing and marketing the product."

FFA's director of information, Cameron Dubes, concurs, noting that, "Unfortunately, our name is a little misleading. There are lots of different careers that surround the farmer." Dubes points out that a growing need exists for technically trained scientists in the field of agriculture. "If we're going to continue to compete in world markets, we have to continue to advance technologically," Dubes says.

Potomac Fever meeting slated

The Eastern Lancaster County School District, Adult Farmer Program will hold an educational meeting to inform area farmers and other horse owners about the horse disease Potomac Fever. The meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, November 12 starting at 7:30 p.m.. in the Blue Ball Elementary School. Speaker for the evening will be Dr. J. Palmer from the University of Pennsylvania, New Bolton Center.

Potomac Horse Fever is a disease of horses which was first recognized in Montgomery County Maryland in 1979. Affected horses develop a high fever, become depressed and go off feed. They may develop a life-threatening diarrhea or severe colic. Founder is a frequent symptom, often necessitating humane destruction. The disease has also been referred to as Potomac Valley Fever, Acute Equine Diarrheal Syndrome (AEDS), and Equine Monocytic ehrlichiosis. A similar disease has been seen along the Susquehanna River by several practitioners. In the fall of 1984, these cases were confirmed to be Potomac Horse Fever. It is now evident that the disease is widespread and has been confirmed in Ohio, West Virginia, New Jersey, Illinois, New York, Wisconsin, Idaho, Minnesota, and Kentucky as well as Pennsylvania and Maryland. A large amount of information has been learned about Potomac Horse Fever since its initial identification. Dr. Palmer will discuss this information including the usual setting in which the disease occurs, factors associated with infection with the Potomac Fever agent, clinical signs resulting from infection, and information concerning the cause and transmission of the disease, as well as plans for future studies in the control and treatment of the disease.

Anyone who owns or works with horses is invited to attend this informative meeting to be held at the Blue Ball Elementary School starting at 7:30 p.m. on November 12. The school is located on Ewell Road just east of the intersection of Route 23 and 322 in the village of Blue Ball. For more information contact Bob Anderson at 354-4525.

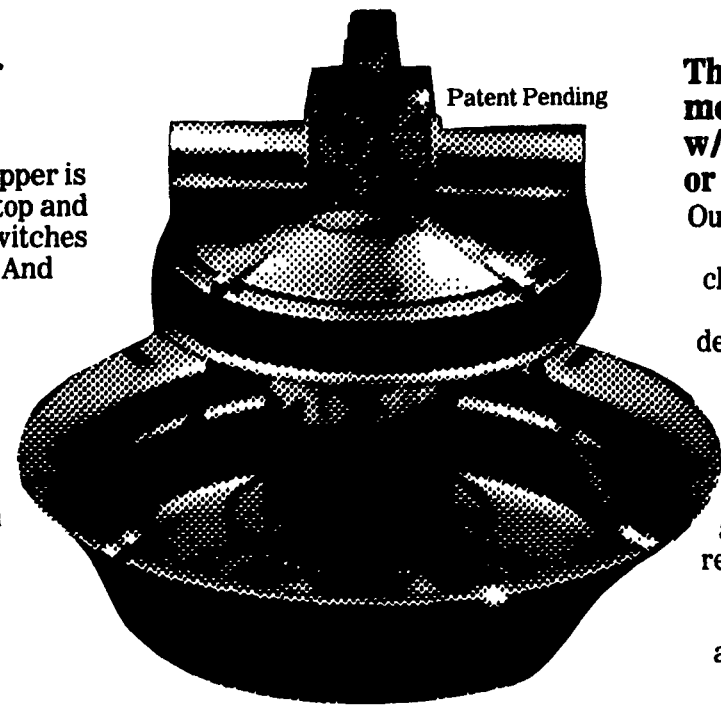
Beacon's Automatic Turkey Feeding Systems.



The Hopper - fewer refills, easier maintenance.
Our 150 lb. capacity Hopper is available with safety stop and unimax level control switches for accurate feed flow. And the Hopper slides completely off its base so the entire system can be raised to its maximum height for easy clean-out of the house.
In place of the crimped auger tube, we supply a single roll tube that's so durable we guarantee both auger and tube for 12 years.

The Feeding Stations protect your birds while serving more of them
The exclusive nylon collar on our feeding stations allows each station to rotate completely around the tube while preventing metal to metal friction and wear. This free-swinging feature protects birds from bruising and makes cleanout of the house a snap. Just turn the stations upside-down and empty. For maintenance, the stations release in minutes by removing two bolts. There's no need to dismantle the auger tube.

And there's more. Our feeding pans - the largest on the market - are 20 inches in diameter with a feed saving ring to reach more birds with less equipment.

BEACON

The Drive Units - more efficient power w/choice of belts or gears
Our drive units come with a 1/3 HP motor and your choice of belts or gears. At 425 RPM, our belt drive delivers a remarkable 1200 lb./hr. - 33 percent faster than the conventional gear method. Both belt and gear units have identical features, such as dual hanging cables to reduce torque and balance the system, and an automatic on/off switch for accurate feed control and maintenance-free operation. Our drive units, as well as hopper, have double race bearings for longer life. A lot longer.

These are just some of the ways Beacon Feeding Systems can improve the efficiency of your entire operation.

LANCASTER – Friends of Agricultural Land Preservation, the member organization supporting farmland preservation efforts in Lancaster County, will hold an inaugural Annual Dinner Meeting, on Wednesday, Nov. 13, at 7 p.m., at the Olde Hickory Inn, Oregon Pike, Lancaster.

The new initiative of the Agricultural Preserve Board, established earlier this Fall, represents a partnership between the public and private sectors to save Lancaster County farmland.

The evening's program will include a highlight of local agricultural land preservation activities, recognition a supporters and the installation of officers for "Friends." Additionally, a national farmland preservation perspective will be shared by Ralph Grossi, president of the American Farmland Trust.

Other featured speakers will include Amos Funk, Agricultural Preserve Board chairman; Alan Musselman, Agricultural Preserve Board director; James E. Huber, Lancaster County commissioner; Richard Brown, Lancaster County Conservancy Board member; Earl Creamer; Homebuilders Association of Lancaster County past-president; and Leon Good, Warwick Township dairy farmer.

Supporting the meeting as patrons are the Horst Development Group, Commonwealth National Bank, Farmers First Bank and Hamilton Bank.

A family style meal will be served. Tickets for the event cost $10 for adults, $6 for children 10 years and under and are available from the Agricultural Preserve Board by phone or mail at (717) 299-8355, 50 North Duke Street, PO Box 3480, Lancaster, Pennsylvania 17603. Bedell asks probe of pork ruling

WASHINGTON – U.S. Rep. Berkley Bedell, D-Iowa, and other members of the House Agriculture Committee have asked for a meeting with the International Trade Commission to discuss its handling of complaints brought by farm interests hurt by subsidized imports such as live hogs and pork products from Canada.

The request was one step Agriculture Committee members took during a hearing on trade problems and the ITC. The hearing was conducted by the subcommittee on trade, chaired by Bedell, and the subcommittee on livestock.

The committee members also asked for a Congressional Research Service review of current trade law and a Government Accounting Office study of how the ITC is handling agricultural trade complaints.

The hearing was called in response to the ITC ruling in July that a countervailing duty should be imposed on live hogs imported from Canada but not on pork products. Witnesses testified that Canadian imports of pork products have increased by at least 10 percent–20 percent in September–since the ruling.

"In making a distinction between live hogs and pork products, the ITC apparently based its decision on the contention that hogs are dissimilar from pork, and that pork producers do not share in the economic risks of pork processing," Bedell said. "This decision understandably strikes pork producers as baffling at best and arbitrary at worst."

Bedell has introduced legislation to correct the problem. The bill would provide for trade relief in cases in which raw agricultural products are used to produce a processed product in a single continuous line of production, or in which the producers of the raw product and the producers of the process product are economically interdependent. The bill is cosponsored by 22 other members of Congress.

Virus attacks NY pumpkins

ITHACA, NY – An aphid-transmitted plant virus that attacks everything from Halloween pumpkins to cucumbers is reaching epidemic proportions in this country, according to a Cornell University plant scientist.

"It's really developing into quite an epidemic," says Thomas Zitter, an associate professor of plant pathology in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell. "It's the greatest threat to cucurbits that we know."

The disease, known as "zucchini yellow mosaic virus," affects all cucurbits, a genera of vegetable crops that includes pumpkins, cucumbers, squash, and melons.

According to Zitter, the disease is spreading rapidly and stands to threaten the output of cucurbits in several states.

Plants infected with the virus show symptoms such as mottled leaves and bumpy, disfigured, and discolored fruits. Infected pumpkins, for example, lose their symmetrical shape to a serious of bumps that cover the otherwise smooth surface. The infected fruits are safe to eat, but their appearance will make them less marketable.

"Most growers are afraid to put them on their roadside stands," Zitter says.

The virus is doubly damaging because it not only disfigures the fruits, but it reduces the yield of the crop. In extreme cases, it can eliminate an entire crop. Recently, Zitter witnessed a case where the disease ruined 90 percent of the pumpkin crop on a New York farm.

Scientists first identified the disease in northern Italy in 1981; later that same year, it was discovered in southern France. Today, zucchini yellow mosaic virus has been found in several European countries, as well as the United States, Morocco, Lebanon, Israel, Egypt and Guadeloupe.

Cornell's Zitter says scientists first documented the virus' presence in the United States in 1982, when it was discovered infesting a field of summer squash in Connecticut. Since that time, the virus has turned up in Arizona, Arkansas, California, Florida, Minnesota, New Jersey, and New York.

Scientists are not sure how the disease is transmitted over long distances, but they know how it is transmitted from plant to plant: by aphids, which are also known as plant lice.

Aphids spread the disease so rapidly – in as little as 60 seconds after contact with a plant – that insecticides have proven ineffective against its spread, Zitter says. "No insecticide, no matter how good it is, can kill all the aphids on time."

The spread of the zucchini yellow mosaic virus and other aphid-transmitted plant viruses was aggravated this year by unusually high aphid populations.

"This was a bad aphid year in general and, consequently, there was an extensive spread of aphid-transmitted viruses among many crops, such as sweet corn, dry beans, lettuce, and onions," Zitter points out.

Other aphid-transmitted viral plant diseases, such as cucumber mosaic virus and watermelon mosaic virus, cause many problems for farmers, but they are not as serious as the zucchini yellow mosaic virus, which is more severe and affects a much wider range of crops, Zitter says.

While Zitter is sure the disease is here to stay, he also is confident that a solution to the disease is only a few years away.

"Resistance to the virus is the only answer," Zitter says.

A major breakthrough in the search for a solution to the zucchini yelloe mosaic virus problem came this year when Rosario Provvidenti, a professor of plant pathology at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva, identified virus-resistant traits in cucurbits from China and Nigeria.

Through a system of crossbreeding, Henry M. Munger, professor emeritus of plant breeding in the New York State College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at Cornell, and Richard W. Robinson, professor of horticultural sciences at the Geneva experiment station, along with Provvidenti, are working on ways to add those resistant traits to domestic cucurbits, Zitter says.

"Eventually, they plan to come up with resistant varieties that have the same horticultural characteristics as currently grown cucurbits," Zitter says. "In this country, Cornell is at the cutting edge of research into incorporating viral resistance into varieties of cucurbits."

Cornell scientists are also trying to find out how the disease spread so rapidly, and over such long distances.

Eventually, researcher's hope to develop a comprehensive plan that will be effective against all aphid-transmitted cucurbit viruses.

"The long-range plan for disease control is to deal with the entire complex of these viruses," Zitter says.

Watch out for indoor invaders

LANCASTER — The falling leaves of autumn serve as a reminder that it is time to put away picnic gear, shift the screen and storm windows around and to move more family activities indoors. Fall is also evident when some outdoor insects look around and seek a warm place to spend the winter — such as a cozy home like yours.

These insects sometimes are dubbed "household invaders." Flies, boxelder bugs, ticks, aphids, mites, millipedes and even roaches are among those preferring to move indoors, cautions Arnold G. Lueck, Extension horticultural agent.

Getting into the home presents no problem. Cracks, crevices, a window or door left slightly ajar, can serve as an entryway. A few, such as ticks, ride in on family pets.

Be aware of insects getting into the home during the next few weeks. If caught in the early stages, such few numbers can often by physically ousted with the help of a vacuum cleaner or the use of a household aerosol spray.

Dairymen must play role in marketing, Dairylea president tells convention

SYRACUSE – Farmers must play a bigger role in the marketing of their products if they expect to maintain any part of the efficiencies that are occurring on modern farms.

This was a statement of Clyde E. Rutherford in his report to some 800 delegates and guests attending the 66th Annual Meeting of the 3,000-member cooperative. Dairylea's sales in fiscal 1984-85 totalled $358 million. The co-op is one of the top 100 food companies in the United States and among the top 1,000 U.S. companies by the United States and FORTUNE magazine.

Following an up-beat and optimistic business report by the co-op's management on the preceding afternoon, Rutherford described agriculture and the dairy industry as being under "severe economic pressure."

"As we members require more support in marketing, representation and services," he said, "Dairylea must be there, willing and able to function in our behalf. That is a deep commitment of our Board, our management and our employees. A cooperative must help support the operations of its members and not the other way around."

Referring to the 1985 Farm Bill now being debated in Congress, Rutherford said the final product "will have a direct economic impact on the future of the dairy farmer." He urged his listeners to contact their Congressmen and Senators and ask their support for the concept of "whole herd buyout" to be included in the final bill that emerges from a House-Senate Conference committee.

Rutherford said that he believes farmers should have some choice in when and how they may elect to cease milk production.

"One fact is clear," said the Dairylea President, "national policy requires that we reduce milk production by 10 billion pounds or more. The controversy is not over WHETHER it shall be done, but HOW it shall be done. The recently defeated Olin-Michel bill would have cut production by cutting prices to farmers. Only that and not much more. The Dairy Unity bill (HR 2100) provides that farmers can receive payment for a year's milk production if they agree to cease production for a minimum of three years and sell their cows for beef.

"Obviously, both bills are aimed at reducing production by the only means possible...eliminating producing dairy farms. The real difference is that one bill hammers hard on all producers without regard for the consequences, and the other provides at least some measure of financial help for those who must, by reasons of age or indebtedness, leave dairy farming."

Rutherford said Dairylea supported the Dairy Unity Bill as the "best available deal" for dairymen who require the help it offers.

"But we are not suggesting that any member cease production or reduce production," he said. "Dairylea has markets for your milk. A farmer is no different than any other individual who must labor and support his family and himself. A national problem cannot be solved by an individual, whether it is the national debt, the value of the dollar or the amount of surplus milk being produced.

"You must look at the figures as they relate to your own desires and ambitions. If you really and truly want to stay in the business of milk production...and if you can make whatever adjustments are necessary to get through the next couple of years...the I encourage you to do so.

"There is little doubt in my mind that the production of milk in total will come down and that, ultimately, prices to farmers will improve. Consumption is increasing. The negative stories about milk are being outnumbered by more and more positive stories."

Rutherford said that production efficiencies of up to 40 percent per cow are possible with new technological advances (such as the bovine growth hormone) but warned that unless farmers control their own marketing, they may never reap any of the rewards of the improved on-farm efficiency.

If we move production per cow upward to a national average of 20,000 pounds, as some people are predicting, will we pass along every bit of efficiency to the marketing chain through lower farm milk prices?" he asked. "I'm in favor of lowering per unit consumer prices by whatever reasonable amount we can. But SOME of the profit has to stick to MY fingers or I'm just running to keep even.

"Dairylea sees very clearly that our member's best opportunity to benefit from their efficiencies is through having a direct hand in the marketing chain. If dairy farmers are, as always, forced to compete with each other for someone else to buy their milk, there is no doubt that every cent of efficiency will be lost as milk drops to the lowest common denominator created by a buyers' market. The only way some portion of that increased farm efficiency can be saved for the farmer is through sharing in the returns from the marketplace."

PFU honors PREA

HERSHEY – The Pennsylvania Farmers Union commemorated the 50th anniversary of the Rural Electric Association by presenting a special award to PREA President, William F. Matson, during the farm organization's 14th Annual Convention at the Hotel Hershey.

The award, which congratulated REA for "providing the most significant improvement in rural life during the 20th century," was presented during a luncheon Thursday.

In presenting the award, Farmers Union Executive Director Charles L. Reed reminded the delegates of the many changes that electricity had made in rural life. "We owe a great deal to our Rural Electric Cooperatives," he said. Now we must work in Congress to help them stay strong."

We have more than just one "hot" number.

When most seed salesmen stop by to talk, they usually spend their time talking about that one "hot" number they have to sell.

But your Pioneer sales representative is a little different. He has a whole line up of top performing hybrids. So, when he comes by, he doesn't talk just one hybrid. He talks HYBRIDS. He talks corn.

Performance wise, 3744 is tough to beat. Besides outyielding the competition by a wide margin over the last three years, 3744 usually dries down faster. It has excellent root and stalk strength, resists Northern, Southern and Carbonum Leaf Blights, and does well under higher populations and higher management or irrigation.

3352

This newcomer has already proven itself as the yield leader for its maturity. Over the last three years in this area, 3352 holds a significant yield advantage against competitive hybrids. Now, that kind of performance speaks for itself. But besides yields, 3352 has very good emergence and early vigor along with excellent staygreen and leaf disease resistance against Northern and Southern Leaf Blights, Eyespot and Gray Leafspot. This hybrid is going to surprise a lot of folks.

3378

A leading hybrid with the ability to deliver big, hefty yields in poor growing seasons as well as good growing seasons. 3378 owes much of this success to its hearty agronomic traits like outstanding plant health, superb standability, fast emergence, strong drouth tolerance and ears that "flex" to accommodate growing conditions. With so much going for it, it's not hard to see why 3378 is a lot of growers' favorite corn. Plant some and you'll be convinced too.

State dairy promotion board stays with "good taste" campaign

BY WENDY WEHR

STATE COLLEGE — The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program advisory board has placed its bet. The board has put its money down on the "good taste" ad campaign to sell more milk to the state's consumers.

During a two-day meeting here on Oct. 31 and Nov. 1, the dairy advisory board voted to retain HBM/Creamer, Inc., as its advertising agency through September 1986. In addition, the group approved a $2 million budget and re-elected president Donald Duncan to chair the dairy advisory board.

Health and fitness campaigns have always been the heavy favorites in dairy promotions. But during the board's first 15 months of operation, Creamer created the "Make It Milk" campaign, which bucked the trends in dairy promotion and featured the good taste of milk, and its appeal as a thirst-quenching beverage.

In the Pittsburgh-based firm's presentation on Thursday, the Creamer representatives offered up more of the same. Continuing the "Make It Milk" theme, they proposed advertisements that portray milk as the "fashionable" drink and the beverage that is the natural winner over the "cola wars" competitors.

Creamer also suggested hitting hard on keeping and serving milk cold, creating a premium milk product, linking milk with complementary foods in advertising campaigns, and developing a specifically Pennsylvania identity for the state's dairy products.

In claiming the board's advertising campaign for another year, Creamer beat out Kelly-Michener, a Lancaster-based agency. These two agencies were the finalists out of 15 firms that initially submitted requests for proposals to the board.

Although the decision to retain Creamer was a unanimous vote of the board members in attendance, debate in a closed-door session before the decision was lengthy. "Competition is a wonderful thing," commented board president Donald Duncan following the vote, adding that ideas from the other agency will be considered fully by the board.

In other action at the meeting, the board approved a $2 million budget through Sept. 30, 1986. Nearly $1.7 million was set aside for advertising and promotion, while $70,000 was allocated for the local funding program.

Other funds were allocated as follows: $250,000 for the three area Dairy Council units and the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess and Promotion Services; $25,000 for milk flavor research conducted by Dr. Sidney Barnard at Penn State; $30,000 for miscellaneous promotions; and less than $100,000 for administrative and board expenses.

In reviewing the budget for the first 15 months of the board's operation, Donald Duncan pointed out that administrative expenses for the period amounted to less than one percent of the total.

"No farmers' money is going in to operate this program," remarked Thad Woodward, board vice-president. Interest income of $58,000 completely covered the board's administrative costs.

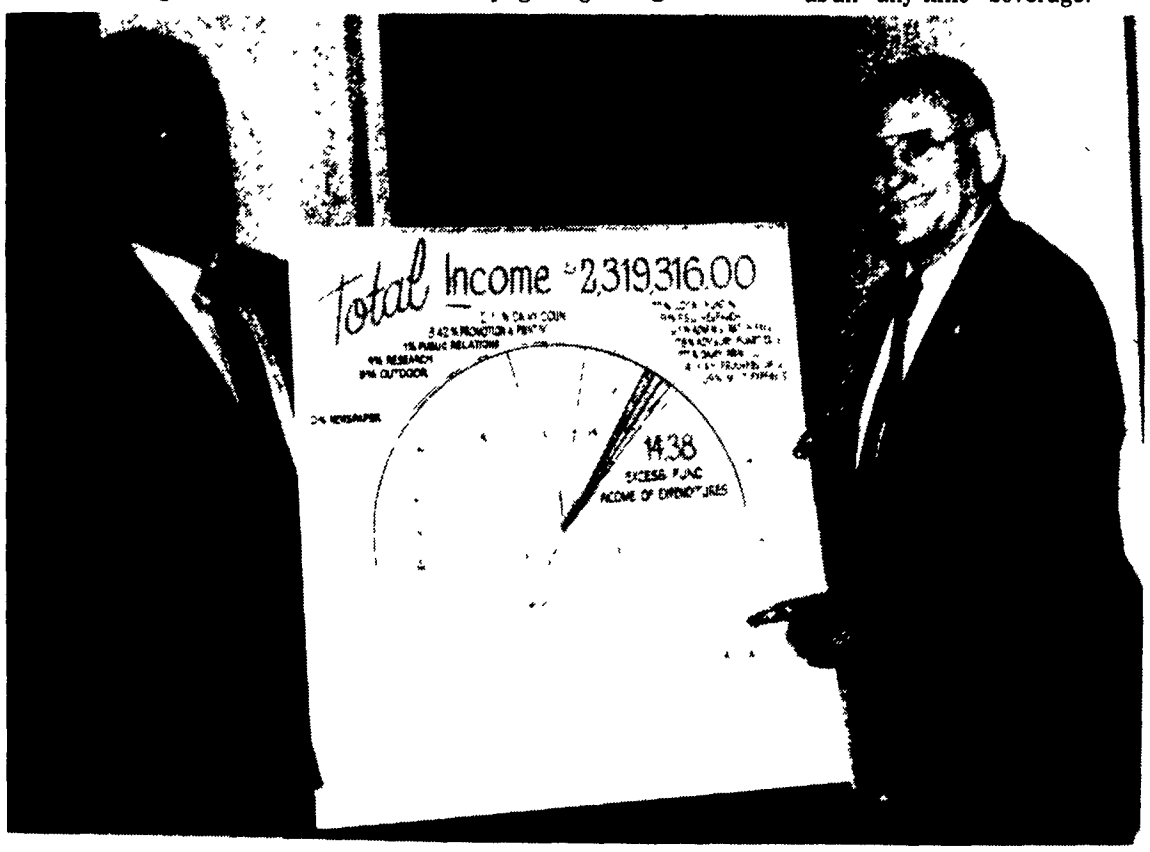
The board took in more than $2.5 million in income last year.

Both Duncan and Woodward were re-elected during the two-day meeting. Thanking the board for the vote of confidence, Duncan said, "I hope we can continue in the same direction, but go on to bigger and better things."

Also heard during the board meeting was a report on a benchmark study conducted by Creamer, and a report on the recently concluded "Make It With Milk and Other Dairy Products" recipe contest. About 500 entries were received for the contest, and some 200 newspaper articles, 25 television segments and 25 radio stories were generated about the competition.

In the benchmark study, 346 male and female heads of households from across Pennsylvania were interviewed about their attitudes toward milk and their recognition of dairy promotion themes. "Make It Milk is really getting recognition out there," remarked Stan Muschweck of Creamer while reporting on the study.

Compared with an initial study conducted a year ago by the firm, milk now scored better on taste But, added Muschweck, there has to be a greater acceptance of milk as an "any-time" beverage.



Donald Duncan, right, was pleased with the budget breakdown for the first 15 months of the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program. At left is Bill Smedley, PDA marketing specialist working with the dairy program.

The first payment of $3 and nomination must be paid by April 15, 1986. The second nomination and payment of $11 is due Oct. 1, 1986, and the final payment of $20 is required by Oct. 1, 1987.

A Pennsylvania Holstein breeder may nominate as many heifer calves as he wishes.

All money received from the nominations for the Futurity will make up the purse. Fifty percent of the purse will be awarded to the first-place animal, and the remainder will be divided among the other participants.

Any animal sold after being nominated for the Futurity will remain eligible if the new owner makes any subsequent payments.

Van Houtens produce

At this time of year the Van Houten stand features a variety of fall crops in addition to meats processed for them by the Country Store of Pennsdale. This day the tables are piled with broccoli, brussels sprouts, a final picking of green beans, cauliflower, purple cauliflower, cabbage, eggplant, squash, peppers and tomatoes.

According to Bobby, 200 of the Van Houtens' 1200 acres are devoted to produce. The remaining land is planted in grain crops such as corn, soybeans, oats and wheat. But tomatoes, Bobby says, are their biggest crop.

This year, Bobby said, they grew 35 acres of tomatoes. They shipped more than 35,000 25-pound boxes during the season, making a total of more than 437 tons of tomatoes for the year.

Although the Van Houtens retail tomatoes at Greenmarket, they also sell wholesale. They have contracted in the past to grow tomatoes for companies such as Chef Boyardee of Milton, Pa.

"We're just learning what the advertisers always knew," said Ann as Bobby displayed an attractive tomato carton he'd designed. Since they've been using the new carton inscribed with their name, address and telephone number, Bobby says, they've picked up at least three new wholesale customers.

Depending upon the time of year, the Van Houtens employ a crew of 50 area people, some on a part-time basis. Cruz Jimenez, a native of Puerto Rico, has been with them for 18 years. Ann says he has talents that are quite useful in the marketplace.

Cruz, she says, is able to wait on five people at once, remembering what each one wants and giving each the correct change, in addition to keeping an eye on pickpockets and shoplifters. And during the entire time, Ann reports, he still manages to flirt with all the ladies.

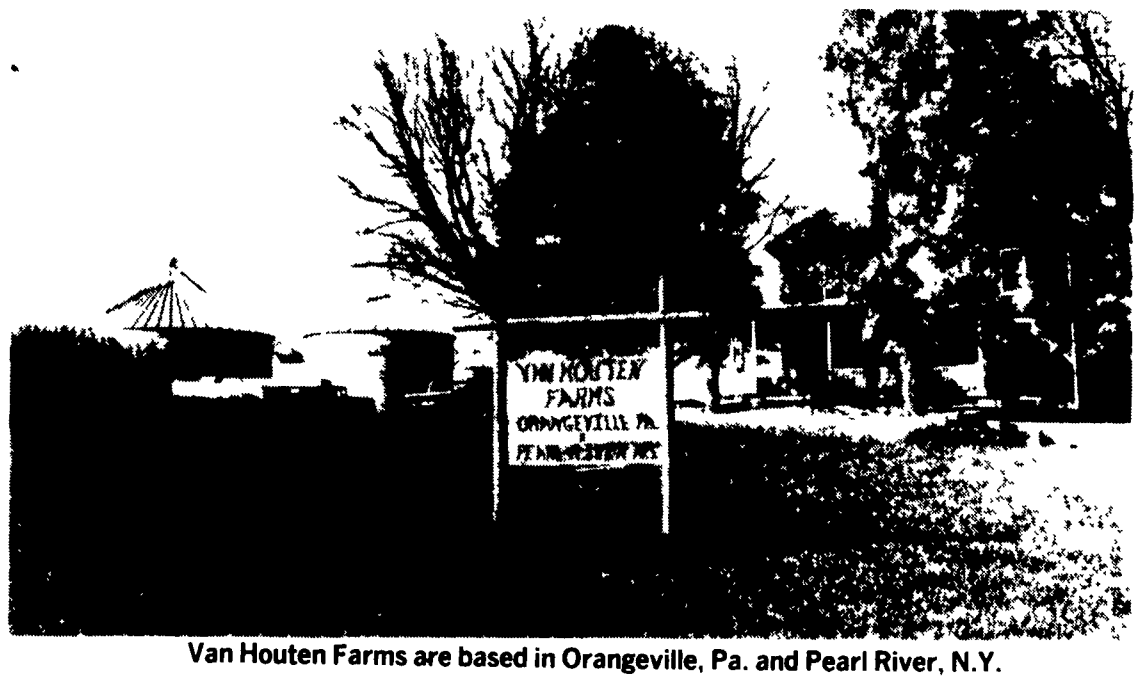
New Yorkers are very much in favor of the Greenmarkets.

Henry Nugent, a longtime customer of the Van Houtens, remarks, "I like the people... and also the produce. They do bring it down fresh. People are very friendly. I only came for garlic and to say 'Hello.'"

Nina Kaem, departing with bags of groceries hung over the handlebars of her bicycle, summed things up nicely up saying, "It's a very good market. The quality is good, prices are low, and the people are very pleasant. It is a nice experience. New Yorkers are used to paying high prices for horrible quality."

It was 5:30 p.m. under cloudy skies and the street lights were blinking again. Ann was preparing to leave. But as before, the farmers paid little heed to the street lights. Instead, it was empty produce cartons and heftier cash boxes that signalled the end of the day for them.

Customers find all kinds of ways to carry their loot home. This woman prefers using her bicycle.



Van Houten Farms are based in Orangeville, Pa. and Pearl River, N.Y.

USDA seeks comments on tobacco marketing

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is seeking public comment to help determine the national marketing quota for the 1986 crop of flue-cured tobacco, said Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

As part of the comment process, USDA will hold a public meeting from 1 to 3 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 12 at the Pee Dee Research and Education Center, Pocket Road near Exit 169, I-95, Florence, South Carolina.

The 1986 quota will be based on an estimated 1986 disappearance, currently projected at 875 million pounds, and on any needed inventory adjustment, Rank said.

Options being considered for the 1986 national marketing quota range from 775 million pounds (equal to the 1985 quota) to 744 million pounds (4.0 percent below the 1985 quota and the minimum permitted by law). These options will be re-evaluated if legislative changes in the procedure for quota determination are enacted before the marketing quota is announced, Rank said.

Rank said USDA estimates the total supply for 1985 at 2.860 billion pounds based on the sum of the July 1, 1985 carryover of 2.080 billion pounds and estimated marketings of 780 million pounds.

Rank said the estimated total supply for 1985 of 2.860 billion pounds is 728 million pounds above the proposed reserve supply level, now forecast at 2.132 billion pounds.

Rank said the reserve supply level is determined by a formula set by law at 275 percent of a year's normal domestic consumption plus 165 percent of a year's normal exports plus 5 percent of that total. Normal consumption and export levels are based on a 10-year average adjusted for trends.

Written comments should be sent to arrive no later than Nov. 15 to: Director, Commodity Analysis division, ASCS/USDA, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013. All comments will be available for public inspection during regular business hours in room 3741-S of USDA's South Building in Washington, D.C.

Dairy Marketing

Orders 2, 4 expand December 1

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agricutlure has issued an order amending the Middle Atlantic and New York-New Jersey federal milk marketing orders after producers covered by the two agreements overwhelmingly approved a referendum on the recommended changes.

Edward T. Coughlin, dairy official with USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service in Washington, D.C., said the effective date of the order applies to all milk marketings on or after Dec. 1, 1985.

Coughlin said the amendments would:

— Expand the Middle Atlantic and New York-New Jersey marketing areas to include 20 additional Pennsylvania counties. The Middle Atlantic marketing area will be expanded to include the five counties of Burks, Carbon, Lehigh, Northampton and Schuylkill.

The New York-New Jersey marketing area will be expanded to include the counties of Bradford, Columbia, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Lycoming, Monroe, Northumberland, Pike, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Union, Wayne and Wyoming.

— Revise the location adjustment provisions of each order by extending the plus 15-cent fixed differential under the New York-New Jersey order to include the 71-80 mile zone; and by increasing the minus location rate to 2.2 cents per hundredweight per 10-mile zone under the Middle Atlantic order, except that in the Pennsylvania counties of Berks, Dauphin and Lebanon the location adjustment would be minus 10 cents per hundredweight.

Coughlin said the referendum on expanding the Middle Atlantic order was approved by 75.6 percent of the producers, while the New York-New Jersey producers voted 84.4 percent in favor of the amendments. Producers associated with the Middle Atlantic order also approved, by separate referendum, an extension of the current advertising and promotion plan. That provision was approved by 98.9 percent of the producers.

Coughlin added the amendments are based on testimony presented at a 24-day public hearing held at Allentown and Philadelphia, between July 19 through Oct. 26, 1983.

Principal cities in the marketing areas are Philadelphia, Baltimore, Md., Washington, D.C., Newark, N.J., and Albany, Syracuse and New York, N.Y.

The amendments were published in the Nov. 1 Federal Register. Copies also may be obtained from Joseph D. Shine, market administrator, P.O. Box 710, Alexandria, Va. 22313 - phone (703) 549-7000; Thomas A. Farmers can adjust to lower dairy prices

NEWARK, Del. — It seems inevitable that dairy farming will become generally less profitable as U.S. policymakers seek to discourage excess milk production. At least a 10 percent reduction in milk production is needed to bring supply in balance with demand.

How can farmers adjust to the impacts of future dairy policy decisions?

According to Gerald F. Vaughn, University of Delaware extension farm policy specialist, producers who are competent financial managers as well as efficient herd managers stand a better chance of adjusting–especially if they're getting better at making economic decisions.

"Improved financial management," he says, "includes tighter production cost control, better records and accounts, more effective personnel management, a prudent debt load, and estate planning to transfer a sound farm business operation to an heir if appropriate." It also means finding new ways for a family to augment its income through off-farm employment or other sources.

"The advantage will go to dairy farms on better soils, large enough to adopt emerging technology and achieve scale economies, situated along good roads in the midst of other dairy farms," the economist says. "Very small farms on poorer soils or at the edge of bulk tank routes may be disadvantaged. All producers must be close to farm supply firms and milk processors, since even top dairy farmers can't survive without these services and market outlets."

Size alone doesn't guarantee success, Vaughn cautions. Larger farms and those with high-producing cows tend to be more profitable. But that's not always the case. There are unprofitable large dairy farms and profitable smaller ones. "So even under sharply lower milk prices, smaller operations won't necessarily feel the pinch more than large ones–especially since many smaller operators earn substantial off-farm income."

Off-farm income isn't the only way to survive on America's dairy farms. Debt loan and labor costs can also make a difference, the specialist says. Many smaller dairy farms have little or no debt. And those that depend on family labor can often avoid or monimize costly services and fringe benefits to hired workers. Milk production costs can range from $5 to $15 or more per hundredweight on a dairy farm, which suggests that many operators could improve their efficiency.

"Some analysts feel that economic recovery for the dairy industry will ultimately require a policy of whole-farm retirement," Vaughn says. "Otherwise, farmers will try to achieve production cutbacks by eliminating a few cows or lowering milk output per cow–both practices which may reduce efficiency and lead to higher production costs. And if bovine growth hormones–capable of increasing milk output by up to 40 percent per cow–are rapidly adopted in larger herds, the U.S. may soon need far fewer cows and dairy farms than it has now."

Dairy farmers in urbanizing areas are subject to the additional pressures of rising real estate values and property taxes. To help hold such pressures in check the economist suggests these producers consider participating in farmland preservation and farmland assessment programs.

"Dairy cooperatives will share in the adjustment process which faces the industry," Vaughn says. "They may be able to help farmers who want to try alternatives to dairying, including other types of farming or off-farm employment. They can join forces with the Cooperative Extension Service, lending institutions, employment services and others in setting up programs of assistance."

Cooperatives can also help by becoming more aggressive on behalf of the farmers who remain in the dairy business, the specialist says. For example, cooperatives may be able to strengthen their bargaining position in negotiating milk prices with processors by forming more effective alliances with other cooperatives, including possible mergers.

Vaughn concludes with this note of caution to cooperatives now in the process of expanding their manufacturing capacity in response to current demand for milk in manufactured dairy products: "If U.S. dairy policy succeeds in reducing or eliminating milk surpluses, there may be less milk available for manufacturing and these cooperatives could end up with excess manufacturing capacity." He suggests their farmer-members consider this possibility when evaluating investment in more manufacturing capacity.

The Dairy Business

By Newton Bair

TEACH THEM THE ECONOMICS OF FARMING

The word "economics" is seldom used in the public school system. If it is ever heard inside a classroom, it is regarded as a vague, abstract term that somehow is related to the operation of "big business." At any rate, it is something to be forgotten or postponed until you have to face that stodgy professor of "economics," at a later date.

If you are one who never got around to studying the subject in a formal manner, the first exposure to the word comes from your banker or accountant. The word quickly loses its abstract meaning, and takes on the simpler one of "money management."

Management of one's money certainly is not the only definition of the word "economics." My thesaurus-dictionary has a whole paragraph of descriptive terms defining the meaning of the word, and they can be applied directly to farming.

"Economics" is defined as thriftiness, frugality, care, husbandry, and good management. It involves, in the proper context, words like saving, economize and thrift, and phrases such as "meet one's expenses," "paying one's way," "lay by," "store up," "hoard," and "provide for a rainy day." It can also include such derogatory terms as "miserly," "stingy," and "scrimping."

Webster's Dictionary defines economics as "the management of the income and expenditures of a household, private business, or government, to satisfy the material necessities, to avoid waste or needless expenditure." I've skipped some of the excess wording in order to get to the real meat and meaning of the subject.

What is the big attraction to farming? The rural scene, the fields, the cattle, and, for many people, the appeal of owning and working with big, complex machinery. We got completely engrossed in the complexities of crops, chemicals, harvest, breeding, milking, and repairing and operating all kinds of mechanical monsters.

The pure mechanics of farming can occupy most of our time and attention. The work must get done, and since that's what we like best, we exhaust ourselves pursuing the mechanics of production.

THE FATAL FLAW

The economics of farming, as described above, often becomes incidental to the everyday work, and that can become a fatal flaw. At one time, long, long ago, it might have been possible to eke out a satisfactory living from the soil without serious considerations of such things as cash flow, mortgages, operating loans, and interest on borrowed money. In today's world, those things become the first and most important things to consider.

The key to making a farm pay is CASH FLOW, and the proper management of that cash. Toil and sweat are futile unless translated into NUMBERS THAT BALANCE, what goes in against what goes out. And that is what we mean by the economics of farming.

It may seem as if it goes against our Christian ethic, but before becoming a farmer, anyone, whether young or old, must first become aware of the economics of the farm as a business. Sure, he must have a lot of technical know-how, as well as a strong back and lots of energy. But his most valuable training and asset will be a working knowledge of how, why, where and when of money. Money is no longer a filthy word. Perhaps it isn't everything, but it is the ultimate in symbolism for toil and survival in our modern world.

Good money management is not necessarily an in-born trait. It must be learned. It should be taught in school, as well as at mother's and father's knee. All parents who instill good economic attitudes and practice, as well as good moral and ethical living, will have given their children a valuable legacy. And they will have been spared the fatal flaw of ignorance, and be much better prepared for life, whether as a farmer or consumer of farm goods.

ADADC District 17 meets Nov. 15

WILLIAMSPORT — Local dairy producers from the District 17 area of the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council are encouraged to attend their fall district meeting. It will take place on Nov. 15 at the Gellatt Grange Hall at 8 p.m.

The meeting will review the milk promotion activities of ADADC over the past year. During 1985, dairy producers nationwide will invest over $200 million nationally in the promotion of their products. This has resulted in major developments in national and local dairy promotion programs. Producers can learn about these activities as well as look ahead to 1986 by attending the meeting.

District 17 is directed by Allen Roszel from Montrose. It encompasses the counties of Carbon, Lackawanna, Luzerne, Susquehanna, Wayne and Wyoming. All dairy producers are invited.

The meeting will be preceded by a chicken and biscuit dinner at a cost of $5. For further information and tickets contact Charles Kier at (717) 323-2552, or call ADADC's tollfree hotline at 800-HOT-MILK.

MAMMA features Carpenter in fitness campaign

TOWSON, Md. – Bob Carpenter, center for the Washington Capitals ice hockey team will be featured in a special fitness poster promotion sponsored by MAMMA, the Middle Atlantic Milk Marketing Area. Youth 15 years and younger who attend the Capitals' November 23 game will receive a life-size poster of Carpenter, compliments of MAMMA and the Caps.

Carpenter has scored many firsts in his career in the National Hockey League. He became the first American-born player to score over 50 goals (53) in a single NHL season. Performing in all 80 regular season games, he was second on the team in scoring with 95 points, second in game-winning goals with seven, fifth in assists with 42, third in power play goals with 12, and led the NHL in first-goals with 13.

In his fourth Capitals season, Bob became the star center that the team had hoped for when they drafted him out of St. John's Prep in 1981. He has the distinction of being the first high school player to jump directly into the NHL. While at St. John's, he led the hockey team to the Massachusetts State Championship in 1978-79 and was twice named MVP of the Division One high school ranks. He has averaged nearly 75 points per season during his young NHL career.

With curly brown hair and natural good looks, Carpenter is pictured on the poster in his hockey uniform, holding a carton of milk. A scale along the side of the poster allows a child to measure and chart his or her growth. Printed in bold letters on the poster is "DRINK YOUR MILK AND SEE HOW YOU MEASURE UP TO BOB CARPENTER."

MAMMA originated the use of the growth chart to promote milk with sports stars in the summer of 1984. That summer, Cal Ripken, Jr. and Mike Schmidt were featured on posters that asked young fans to "Drink Your Milk and See How You Measure Up." The concept of using sports figures as models of fitness proved to be an excellent means to get a positive message about milk across to youths.

Based on the popularity of the first posters, MAMMA has had no problem in recruiting major league sports figures to feature on the fitness posters. The poster featuring Carpenter is the eighth in a series that has also included Dave Poulin, Carpenter's team mate Scott Stevens, Dave MacWilliams, Bobby Jones and Jeff Ruland.

The Carpenter fitness poster will be given out to youths as they enter Capital Center for the Caps vs. Quebec Nordiques game. Game time is 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 23. The Capital Center is located in Landover, Md. For ticket information call Capitals Information (301) 386-7000 or the Ticket Center Phone Charge (800) 448-9009.

Chore-Time's 14" RLX Fan for the sidewall or the pit...

Chore-Time's 14-inch RLX Fan is ideal for use in smaller confinement areas such as farrowing and nursery chambers for hogs, and smaller veal calf barns. To provide the delicate air control required by these smaller areas, the variable speed fan offers a cfm range of from 150 to 1660, both measured at .05 inches static pressure. The 14RLX also saves energy by holding its operating efficiency as its cfm is reduced. And, the fan offers all the corrosion resistance, strength, and durability of Chore-Time's famous RLX fan family.

Chore-Time's 18" & 24" RLX Fans For the sidewall or the pit...

Chore-Time's 18-and 24-inch RLX Fans establish new standards in corrosion resistance. The strong, dense RLX housing is made of the same durable material used for truck body parts and canoes. It simply will not corrode. And it won't splinter like fiberglass, even in cold weather. The streamlined, vacuum-formed housing completely eliminates corners which might collect dirt and produce eddy currents, both restricting air flow. The smooth surface cleans easily.

MORE FEATURES:

Die-cast Aluminum Blade gives long use with proven efficiency. Blowout Hood does not restrict air movement like louvers do; also have longer life, lower maintenance. Stainless Steel Motor Mounts give additional insurance against corrosion. These features combine for an efficient, long-life unit.

Bea Turner finds her dream in Angora goat farm

BY BARBARA RADER
Staff Correspondent

PORTERSVILLE — Bea Turner has spent the better part of her adult life pursuing a childhood dream — to be a farmer. Today, Bea's Windhaven Angoras, a successful Angora goat farm, is the fulfillment of that dream.

Nestled in the country between Butler and New Castle, Windhaven Acres is home for the Turner's herd of 100 Angora goats.

Actually, Bea says, it was sheep that started her on the path which led to an Angora goat farm. At first she pursued her dream of being a farmer by investing in a few head of sheep. The sheep prompted an interest in spinning and, in turn, the investment in Angora goats.

Now, nearly two years after purchasing her first goats, Bea has added equipment and expanded her farming dream into a successful business. After much discussion among her family of four grown children and her husband, David, the 43-acre farm was dubbed Windhaven.

"The wind comes from it being the highest point in the township, so we get lots of wind here," Bea noted, adding, "and it just simply feels like we're in heaven."

Windhaven has the first sizeable herd of Angora goats in Pennsylvania. However, Bea said, a few smaller herds are scattered across the state.

Bea's search for mohair to supply her spinning hobby led her to Edwards Plateau, Texas, where the range is home for thousands of Angora goats. Breeders in Texas, she explained, have built an entire industry around raising these special goats. Some breeders, she said, raise only billy goats since they produce more hair than the does.

Two years ago, Bea and her husband, David, purchased a foundation herd from Texas goat breeders Schmidt, Ebling and Stewart. The original herd included 120 head of registered and commercial goats.

One of the original herd was a registered doe carrying triplets sired by the highest selling buck in the nation. In 1983 that buck sold for $4,600. However, since that time, others have sold for even higher prices.

"Blue Eyes," now a yearling buck, was one of the triplets and Bea is looking forward to using him as one of her sires.

The primary reason for raising Angora goats is for their hair, Bea explained. Registered does are needed to produce bucks. To upgrade your herd and control inbreeding, Bea says, it's best to have a good registered buck.

No commercial bucks are kept — they are all turned into whethers. Basically, the whethers are the only animals that can pay their way and don't have to be eaten in the end. Generally, they also produce more pounds of hair than the others.

A single whether will produce 15 to 18 pounds of hair per shearing, compared to about six pounds from an adult doe.

Healthy Angora does weigh around 80 to 90 pounds, while bucks weigh in at 150 to 180 pounds. Kids about six months tip the scales somewhere between 30 and 50 pounds.

The goats will live about as long as a lamb. Out on the ranges, where the goats live under harsh conditions, the Angoras don't live quite as long as those raised in captivity. Depending on the care they receive, the goats will live and produce for many years. For example, during a visit to Edwards Plateau, David saw a 16-year-old nanny that had just given birth to triplets.

In raising Angora goats, the two most important considerations are sanitation and record keeping, Bea explained. The biggest problem with sanitation is parasites, which attack the goats both internally and externally. The Angora goats are especially prone to a type of lice that ruin their hair.

Coccidiosis, an infectious disease that affects intestines, is another problem that confronts the goats. One of Bea's first battles was with this disease, which

Butter and this Angora kid take time out for a friendly chat.

"Billy," now nearing 9 years of age, is the main sire in the herd. His last shearing was in May, so he has a beautiful coat of hair almost ready for the next shearing.

Bea receives a little affection from one of her adult Angora goats.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Our dairy farm is located "off the beaten path" to say the least. We have the Conestoga River on three sides of our farm and our buildings are located at the tip of the loop in the river. This means that our small peninsula can only be reached by use of a dead end road.

Now this could be considered an advantage or a disadvantage. We are not disturbed by a continuous flow of traffic. But, we are disturbed at odd times by vehicles that do not see the Dead End sign. It is also possible that they deliberately ignore the sign out of curiosity and continue driving down our lane past the woods and summer cottages to our house. There are a few places that I am curious about too and would love to investigate if I had the nerve to drive up their winding driveways into their wooded area.

Some people turn around behind our barn when they realize their mistake. However, there are others who screech to a halt only feet from our front porch. They are so sure that our macadam lane will lead to a bridge across the river.

One night a few months ago, when I was alone, I heard a loud noise and saw three helmeted motorcyclists sitting beside our house. After a bit they roared out our lane. Then within a few minutes another group of five motorcyclists came thundering down our lane to the house. They kept arriving and leaving for half an hour. It was rather frightening and I can only guess that they were on some kind of a road rally.

My husband often tells people to come down and "drop in" (the Conestoga). Another saying of his was to tell people that "we've got dead-end kids."

Angora goats

battered her foundation does during kidding in the spring.

Another hazard is woven fences, Bea noted. The goats get their heads through the fences, but because of their horns, sometimes can't get back through. Horns are necessary for the goats as a way of ridding their bodies of excess heat, especially during the summer months.

Shearing needs to be done with care too, Bea said. Newly-sheared goats must not be left out in a cold rain or they will die, she cautioned. Keeping them dry and out of drafts is essential until they get some hair growth.

Because the goats in Texas have no shelter, the breeders there leave a cape down the backbone. The cape is removed once more hair has grown in.

The hair grows about one inch a month, Bea said, adding that it is important to keep records on the amount of hair each animal produces. Bea has made her own cards for recording all the details on each of her goats.

Each shearing, Bea records the weight of hair sheared from each goat, essential information to managing her business. Bea handles every part of the business except the shearing, which is David's domain.

It usually takes about 15 minutes to shear a kid for the first time, and he will produce an average of 2½ pounds of hair. This is a one-time opportunity as the kid gives a finer, more beautiful fleece than the adults.

Adult goats shear in less time, Bea explained, since they are accustomed to the twice-a-year event.

The adult goats also produce kemp, the coarse, straight hair dairy goats produce. This type of hair won't take the dye in the process for preparing the fleeces for wear.

Bea blends whatever fibers together the customer demands. She raises a few Angora rabbits to complement her goats.

Bea doesn't use any chemicals in the process of washing, carding, dyeing, spinning as she prepares the wool because it destroys the character of the fleece, she said.

In addition to her responsibilities on the farm, Bea teaches spinning to adult education classes in her community and at home as well.

A trip to Texas last February gave Bea the opportunity to attend special classs on Mohair grading Angora goat management.

One of the joys of raising the goats is their gentle personalities, Bea said. It is rare to find a mean animal; more often they are just shy.

"They're just dear little animals," says Bea, who is finally fulfilling her childhood dream.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

"The term is 'heel'," I snapped.

He grins. "Heel."

I stomp off up the hill.

"Hey Mom," had come the question several days before, "Will you go hunting with me?"

Hunting? Me? My idea of hunting is grabbing my bird identification book and field glasses, and setting off for the meadow with the dog by my side.

"Yeah. Can you walk through the soybean field with me and drop to the ground when a pheasant flies up?"

A dog.

He wants me to be his dog. Well, not in so many words, but I get the idea.

Afternoon of the appointed day turns leaden gray. Oppressively cloudy. A mist in the air so thick it's visible.

"I'll get you an orange hat and a red vest," he offers, clomping down the stairs toward the basement's closet. Stylish colors.

There is no covering for ears on the orange hunting hat. With my cold-sensitive ears, I opt instead for my ancient, shapeless, red fuzzy barn hat. It is a better match for the red vest, which is two sizes too big, but therefore allows lots of air space for insulation. Plus, the pockets have ample space for chilly hands. Or at least they do after I unearth two handfuls of candy bar wrappers left from goodness knows when.

He directs me straight through the most lush alfalfa stand on the farm. Nearly knee-high at some spots, every broad, beautiful leaf gleaming with beads of sparkling mist.

Mist. Mist that instantly begins to soak through seams and zippers of my old semi-dress, calf-high leather boots. (Which was the only foot gear I own even faintly appropriate for such an expedition.) Mist that is soaked up by my rolled-up jean cuffs like a sponge thirsting after water.

A chill begins to set in, up to my knees, where the dampness is rapidly spreading. Am I just imagining it, or are those squiching sounds coming from the boot soles?

And we are a mere fifty feet into the first field.

Woodlot, stubble fields, fencerows, briar patches, honeysuckle tangles. We scout them all. Correction. I scout them all, while he waits in the clearings.

He whistles to get my attention. I grimace, hold up both hands in front of me, paw style, and pant. One cottontail, grinning I think, lopes from the corn stubble into a briar patch along the interstate. Smart place to hide.

By the time we exit the soybeans, we have flushed 43 sparrows, one barn cat and a flicker. And someone's lost plastic dove decoy. Is it my imagination or did I hear pheasant laughter echoing from the meadow?

By gosh, if this kid gives me a flea collar for Mother's Day, the fur will fly.

No bones about it. Make that Milk Bones.

Wooff.

NJ FFA officers attend training conference

NEW BRUNSWICK, NJ – The weekend of Oct. 25 to 27 was the New Jersey FFA Chapter Officer Leadership Training Conference. New Jersey FFA state officers conducted a program filled with activities for the 17 chapters represented at YMCA Camp Bernie, Port Murray, NJ. The theme for the weekend was New Jersey FFA Growing America's Finest.

High school students learned the latest in public relations, teamwork and leadership techniques through state officer skits, demonstrations, and slide shows.

Steve Meredith, the national FFA president, was present to motivate and encourage the State FFA Association as to become "Leaders for the New Fields of Agriculture."

Dancing, hayrides, and a bonfire filled the weekend with enthusiasm for the students.

The FFA is part of the vocational agriculture education program throughout the United States. New Jersey has 41 FFA chapters.

Few ingredient recipes mean simple, quick results every time

A search through your cookbook or recipe file will probably reveal that some of your favorite and most-used recipes are the ones that have only several ingredients listed.

This is most likely because they are simple to prepare, yet taste great when you're through. This week, some of our readers share their favorite three- or four-ingredient recipes. Try some of their recipes, and then look for your own.

ICE CREAM PUDDING

1 cup milk
2 3¾-ounce boxes instant pudding, any flavor
Graham cracker crumbs

CHOCOLATE DIPPED PRETZELS

Dip pretzels into chocolate mixture and coat evenly; shake off any excess coating. Place pretzels on waxed paper-lined cookie sheets. Chill in refrigerator until coating sets (about 15 minutes). Gently loosen from waxed paper. Serve immediately or store in refrigerator until ready to serve. Yield will vary according to size of pretzels. Makes about 50 dipped pretzels.

BUTTERY PARMESAN CRESCENTS

2 cups milk
⅓ to ½ cup all-purpose flour

Coarse shred cabbage with a knife. Wash and core apples. Dice them with skin on. Brown sausage in skillet. Drain excess fat and reserve it. Place ⅓ of cabbage in bottom of casserole. Next layer ⅓ of apples and ⅓ of sausage. Repeat layers, ending with sausage. Drizzle 2 tablespoons of reserved fat over top. Place a piece of foil over top. Bake at 350°F. for 1½ hours. Remove foil last 15 minutes.

OVEN-BAKED CHICKEN

2 broiler-fryer chickens (2½ to 3 pounds each), quartered
2 10¾-ounce cans condensed cream of chicken soup
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Place chicken, skin side up, in a single layer in 15x10-inch jelly roll pan. Blend together soup and cheese; spread evenly over chicken. Bake in preheated 350°F. oven for 1¼ to 1½ hours or until chicken is tender and browned. Remove chicken to warm platter; spoon sauce over chicken or use as drippings for gravy. Makes 6 servings.

Overnight French Toast

8 ¾-inch slices French bread
4 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons orange juice, optional
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup butter

Place bread slices in 13½x9-inch baking dish. Combine eggs, milk, sugar, salt, orange juice, and vanilla. Beat well. Pour mixture over bread slices. Turn slices to coat evenly. Cover and refrigerate overnight. To serve, melt 2 tablespoons butter in large skillet. Remove 4 slices bread from dish and saute in butter for 4 minutes on each side. Repeat with remaining slices. Sprinkle with powdered sugar.

No matter what anyone says, nothing is "just as good as a John Deere."

"And ours is just as good as a John Deere." How many times have you heard that? When one manufacturer is so clearly the leader, that's the ultimate claim any competitor can make. But when you put all claims aside, there's nothing like a John Deere tractor with Caster/Action™ mechanical front-wheel drive and 15-speed Power Shift transmission. No combine can match the productive efficiency of a Titan II. And the superior seed/soil environment created by Max-Emerge™ planters is literally legendary. But so is the dealer support that's provided with everything in The Long Green Line.™ Don't take our word for it. Ask anyone. We're happy to be judged by what we're known for.

QUESTION - Pat Bartow, Conestoga, would like a recipe for a whipped topping similar to Cool Whip.

QUESTION - Mrs. C.K. Edgin, Sewell, NJ, would like a recipe for spice cake that tastes more of nutmeg than of any other spice. Mrs. Edgin says her mother got the recipe from a "Clabber Girl" Baking Powder cookbook between 1926 and 1936.

QUESTION - L. Lucille Groff, Denver, would like a recipe for canning apple pie filling.

QUESTION - Mrs. Jerry Hershey, Conestoga, would like a recipe for cheese danish similar to the ones sold by fast food restaurants.

QUESTION - Mrs. Paul Hoover, Ephrata, would like a cheese recipe that tastes like Velveeta cheese.

QUESTION - Mrs. Herbert Todd, Winthrop, NY, would like recipes for sauerkraut

QUESTION - Betty Biehl, Mertztown, would like recipe that use hot farina cereal.

ANSWER - Mrs. Glenn Martin, Ephrata, requested a recipe for yogurt. The recipe below comes from The American International Encyclopedic Cookbook

Yogurt

Let 3 tablespoons prepared yogurt stand at room temperature for about 3 hours. Bring 1 quart milk to boiling point in top part of double boiler Let it cool to a temperature of 120°F. Combine with 3 tablespoons prepared yogurt and set over hot water.

Keep at a temperature of 100°F. to 105°F about 3 hours, or until mixture has the consistency of thick custard. Pour into 5 or 6 custard glasses.

Chill thoroughly in the refrigerator. Always reserve 3 tablespoons of this batch to use as a "starter" for the next quart.

ANSWER - Mrs. Robert Nessle, asked for a recipe for lemon sauce to use over apple betty or apple crisp Thanks go to Mrs. Adin Zimmerman, Millmont, for the following recipe.

Lemon Sauce

2 tablespoons cornstarch	½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt	¼ cup butter or margarine
2 cups boiling water	1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
3 teaspoons lemon juice

Mix together cornstarch, sugar and salt in saucepan Gradually stir in boiling water. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture boils and is thickened and clear Remove from heat; stir in remaining ingredients Serve warm Makes 2¼ cups

ANSWER - Mrs. Lester Newswanger, Shippensburg, requested a recipe to make cream cheese Thanks go to Mrs Adin Zimmerman, Millmont, for the following recipe.

Cream Cheese

1 quart light cream	¼ cup fresh sour milk

Mix well in top of double boiler or stainless bowl. Cover and let stand at room temperature until thick. Skim thin layer off top if necessary. Cut in squares, heat over warm water to 110°F. Make a few strokes across the bottom while warming. Handle carefully so cream doesn't get thin and drain off with the whey. Pour into cloth bag. After 15 minutes, place bag on rack in refrigerator with bowl underneath to catch whey Drain 10 hours or so Press curd with weight on top of bag until curd is pasty Turn into bowl. With fork or mixer work in salt to taste (about ¾ teaspoon). Mix thoroughly. Good with crushed pineapple and served on drained pear chunks

ANSWER - D. Mohn, Ephrata, requested a recipe for pickled tongue. Thanks go to Mrs Harvey Shoemaker, Mt Joy, for the following recipe.

Pickled Tongue

Tongue doesn't have to be soaked overnight, but it must be washed and rubbed thoroughly. Cook the tongue in water until it is soft. Drain water from tongue. When tongue is cold, peel off all the white skin and cut into slices about 1 inch thick. Make a syrup of vinegar, water, salt and pepper. Mrs. Shoemaker says she doesn't use a recipe for the syrup; she just makes it to taste. Pour syrup over tongue and let stand a few days to season

ANSWER - Mrs. J. Robert Moore, Pennington, NY, requested a recipe for cole slaw like that served at Harvest House Restaurant Thanks go to Mrs Jay Spyker for the following recipe.

Harvest House Cole Slaw

1 large head cabbage	1 onion
1 green pepper, optional	1 cup sugar

Shred cabbage, onion and pepper. Sprinkle with sugar Mix the following ingredients and bring to a boil.

1 cup vinegar	¾ cup oil
2 tablespoons sugar	1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed	1 teaspoon salt

Add liquid to cabbage mixture gradually since you may want to use the whole amount. The size of the head of cabbage will determine the amount of liquid to use. Mix well. Cover and refrigerate

ANGEL FOOD DELIGHT

1 16-ounce package angel food cake
2¼ cups milk
2 3¾-ounce packages lemon flavor instant pudding and pie filling
½ cup butter

Prepare cake according to package directions. Bake in a tube pan. Add milk to pudding in small mixing bowl; beat at lowest speed of electric mixer until well blended. Chill. To assemble, slice 1-inch off top of cake. Cut cake 1-inch from outer and inner edges and 1½-inches deep. Remove cake from center. Cream butter; gradually add pudding, mixing until well blended. Fill center of cake with pudding mixture. Replace top layer. Chill several hours or overnight. Serve cake slices with fresh fruit, as desired. Makes 12 to 16 servings.

CHEESE BAKED FISH

1 1-pound package frozen fish fillets, thawed
⅔ cup condensed cream of celery soup
¾ cup dairy sour cream
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese

Drain fillets on absorbent paper toweling; arrange in single layer in 2-quart shallow baking dish. In a 1-quart saucepan combine undiluted soup and sour cream; blend thoroughly. Add ¾ cup cheese: heat over low heat, stirring constantly, until cheese melts. Spread mixture over fillets; bake in preheated 375°F. oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until fish flakes. Sprinle with ¼ cup cheese, return to oven for 5 minutes or until cheese melts Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings. Note: Extra sauce from fish makes an excellent gravy for parsley-buttered potatoes.

SCALLOPED OYSTERS

2 dozen stewing oysters
Saltines
Milk

Spray casserole dish with oil, break a layer of crackers over bottom of dish, lay 1 dozen oysters on crackers. Break another thin layer of crackers over oysters. Break another layer of crackers over second layer of oysters. Pour liquor from oysters over all. Pour milk (the creamier the better) over all until it rises just even with the top layer. May be dotted with butter or margarine. Bake ½ hour at 350°F. Use the lid on the casserole to bake.

(To make in a microwave, cook a few minutes, then check to see if the oysters have shrunk in size. The dish should be steaming).

New Alexandria 4-H Ag Club

Members of the New Alexandria 4-H Club were recognized during a banquet held recently at a local church.

Debbie Ott told members and their families about the club's wide range of activities. Fundraisers for the club included a sub sale and a poinsettia sale. The funds were used to finance a bowling and pizza party, and a swimming party, as well as the banquet.

Club members participated in 4-H activities such as county mall promotion day, a cultural exchange trip to Montreal, county dairy fitting and showmanship demonstration, county livestock demonstration, county public speaking contest, and various state and regional events.

The club's exhibit received Best of Show and the club serapbook placed fourth at Westmoreland County Fair in August.

1985 Westmoreland County 4-H Queen and club member Margee Wolff entertained the group with a 4-H story in which the audience served as characters.

Members who had completed their project books paid their dues and presented a show and tell, received trophies in addition to project completion ribbons and certificates.

THE MICRO WAY

Roast Stuffer Turkey

With the holidays rapidly approaching many people are planning a family dinner that includes a roast turkey. If you'd like to change your tradition a little and roast your turkey in your microwave, you won't have to get up at 5 a.m. to cook the bird!

Roast poultry is one of the easiest meats to cook in your microwave. The meat comes out very tender and juicy (unless it's overcooked!). And the fatty skin browns, and keeps the meat from drying out.

Did you notice I said the skin BROWNS? It does! The skin won't be as brown as when roasted in a range oven. The skin on a few microwaved pieces of cut up chicken won't brown because they cook too quickly. However, a roast turkey brown nicely, because it takes two to three hours to cook.

The biggest difference you will find with microwaved poultry is that the skin, even though it's brown, is not crispy. You need hot dry air to get things crispy, and there isn't any hot dry air in a microwave. You aren't stuck with the soft turkey skin, though. Put the turkey in a hot oven during the standing time, and it gets nice and crispy.

If you don't want to try roasting poultry for the first time for a company dinner, I can't blame you. I wouldn't either. But you can "practice" with a little whole frying chicken. These three to four pound chickens are inexpensive and can be cooked the same way as the turkey. You can see what results you'll get, and how easy it is to microwave stuffed poultry.

Roast Turkey

1 25 to 15 pound turkey, thawed (or a whole chicken)
Salt and pepper
Stuffing
The heel of a loaf of bread
String, heavy thread, or dental floss
Microwave roasting rack (a large "bacon cooker" can be used)
Flat microwave pan to hold rack and turkey (12x8 inch or 13x9 inch, etc.)
Waxed paper.
Browning Butter, recipe below

1. Make sure your turkey is completely thawed in the center before cooking.

2. Rinse the turkey, pat dry, and sprinkle the cavity with salt, pepper, etc. as desired. However, do not sprinkle salt on the outside of the turkey. This causes the skin to split during cooking. You may use pepper or any other herbs or spices you like on the outside.

3. Stuff turkey and put the heel of bread in the opening to hold the stuffing in. Do not use metal skewers. Toothpicks may be used if desired.

4. Truss the turkey: Cross the ends of the drumsticks and tie them together with one piece of string. Place the wings up against the sides of the breast and tie another piece of string around the entire front of the turkey to hold them there. Don't fold the wings underneath, they stick out too much and will get dried out (overcooked).

5. Put the turkey on its side on the rack. Baste with Browning Butter, and cover with waxed paper.

6. Figure the cookng time: Poultry microwaves best on medium high (70,7) for 11 minutes per pound. Then divide the cooking time into quarters, do your figuring on paper if you have to!

For instance, if you have a 15-pound turkey your figures would look like this: 15 pounds times 11 minutes = 165 minutes. 165 minutes divided by 4 = 41¼. The turkey would cook for about 41 minutes on one side, upside down during the second quarter, then on the other side, and finally with breast side up during the last quarter.

7. Microwave turkey for one fourth the cooking time on medium high (70,7).

8. When the oven stops, turn the turkey so the back is up. Drain off any juices from the bottom of the pan, reserving them for gravy. Baste again with Browning Butter, and recover with waxed paper. Repeat step 7.

9. Repeat the turning, basting and cooking two more times, turning the turkey so the other side is up, and then the breast side up.

10. Let the turkey stand, covered with foil for 15 minutes before checking to see if it is done. Standing time gives the center time to finish cooking. If desired, let turkey stand in a preheated, hot oven (450°F) to crisp skin.

11. Test for doneness by cutting the string tying the legs closed and cutting through the skin between the leg and side of the body. Pull the leg out slightly and look at the meat along the thigh bone. If the meat or juices are still pink, cut the other leg open and cook the turkey for 1 minute per pound longer, or until no longer pink.

TIPS: If you have stages or a memory on your oven, set quarter of the cooking time in one memory or stage, programming a pause in between. This way, the oven reminds you to turn and baste the turkey.

To make microwave gravy, measure reserved juices, and skim fat from top if desired. Combine juices and 2 to 3 tablespoons flour per cup of juice, stirring well to prevent lumps. Put in 2-quart bowl or measure, add salt to taste, and microwave on high until it boils and thickens, stirring well every 2 minutes.

Browning Butter

1 stick butter or margarine (unsalted if possible)
1 teaspoon each: pepper, thyme, parsley, Worcestershire sauce, and bottled browning sauce
2 tablespoons lemon juice, optional

Melt the butter (use high for 30-45 seconds) in a measuring cup and stir in the remaining ingredients. Cut recipe in half for chicken.

NOTE: The times above are for microwaves with 600-700 watts of power. For 500-600 W, add 10 seconds per minute; for 400-500 W, add 20 seconds per minute.

Kennard-Dale FFA to compete in safety contest

FAWN GROVE – The Kennard-Dale FFA chapter will compete against other chapters in a farm safety contest sponsored by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Safety Council.

Farmers throughout the state will be checked for their compliance with PTO machinery guarding practices, says Mike Heim, the Kennard-Dale safety committee chairperson. "Many farmers don't maintain proper safety guards on their equipment because they don't want to spend the extra minutes or extra dollars," says Mike Heim. "But even minor accidents can cause hours of down time and hundreds of dollars."

Members of Kennard-Dale will conduct farm inspections, tabulating the guards that are in place of missing on farm machinery. "Farmers should understand that this competition has been established to encourage guards on farm machinery," Mike Heim insists. "Information collected in the competition will not be used for any other purpose."

Chapters will be judged by three criteria: the number of machinery guards already in place, the improvement between tabulations per chapter, and the amount of involvement in the guarding program.

Winning chapters will be honored during the 1986 FFA State Convention held during June at Penn State University.

Birds are choosy when selecting homes

How do birds choose a home? Much the same way you or I do. They evaluate, in their terms: Is the area attractive? Is it close to work (i.e. the finding of berries, insects, seeds, water, etc.)? Is the site good for a home? If there's already a home on the site, is it suitable? And, especially, is this a good place to raise a family?

Nothing enhances a human home-owner's enjoyment and understanding of life much more than watching birds raise their young. And nothing makes watching easier than providing a birdhouse the birds can call their own. Wrens, chickadees, titmice, bluebirds, and swallows are prime occupants for ready-made homes.

Your immediate surroundings will help you determine what kind of birds to provide for, if you want them close by: Wrens are attracted to birdhouses placed fairly close to the ground among dense trees and shrubs. Chickadees and titmice like to nest in patches of large trees. Bluebirds opt for wide open spaces — extensive lawns, golf courses, pastures and cemeteries. Swallows like the same open spaces — so long as they're close to rivers and ponds.

Each kind of bird is almost as choosy about its birdhouse construction as about its site — though all the birds mentioned will move into a basic rectangular, 5-inch wide by 10-inch-high box built of unpainted, ½-inch spruce, fir, pine or exterior plywood. The box should be equipped with 3/8-inch drainage holes in the bottom and a 1½-inch entrance hole placed near the top of one side. Perches aren't needed and in fact may attract nesters such as house sparrows that may injure box users like wrens and chickadees which you are trying to encourage.

Late winter or early spring is ideal birdhouse-building time. Moun the box three to five feet off the ground on a pole, fence post or tree trunk.

Once a bird family is in residence, keep a close watch — for practical as well as pleasurable reasons. A day or two after the young leave the nest, it's birdhouse-cleaning time. If you have played host to bluebirds or wrens, chances are the parents will return to their cleaned-up home to raise a second brood thje same summer. That's one kind of high interest you can tolerate.

Eagles gather for salmon feast

It's probably the largest dinner party in the world–the gathering of about 3,500 bald eagles to feast on salmon every year from October through January.

"It's no small assembly," says National Wildlife magazine, a bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation. On one three-mile-long stretch of Alaska's Chilkat River it is possible to stand in one place with a pair of binoculars and see 2,000 eagles.

The eagles fly to the isolated spot 50 miles north of Juneau to take advantage of the annual spawning run of chum and silver salmon up the 45 mile-long Chilkat.

The salmon enter the Chilkat later than other Alaska streams because of its warm water. The Chilkat's warm water, which is due to the upwelling of water through subterranean gravel beds, allows the fish to spawn into late fall and early winter.

The salmon therefore provide a steady food source for the eagles, especially in winter and early spring–the most stressful times for eagles. The fish arrive in the cold weather; after they spawn and die, the cold air freezess their carcasses until spring, when they thaw out and provide fresh food for the eagles.

Eagles from as far away as Washington state fly to partake in the feast that researchers believe provides a key to eagle abundance in Southeast Alaska, accoring to National Wildlife.

In 1982 Alaska created a 48,000-acre Chilkat Bald Eagle Preserve. Citizens of Haines, the largest town on the banks of the Chilkat, are currently developing a plan to attract another species to the river–people. The citizens hope to draw tourists to see the majestic winter congregation of bald eagles.

MAKE A ZOO TO CHEW

by Polly White

VANILLA DOUGH

1 cup butter
1¼ cups sugar
2 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
3 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

CHOCOLATE DOUGH

1¼ cups butter
1¾ cups confectioners' sugar
2 eggs
6 tablespoons cocoa
2 tablespoons oil
3 cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking soda

To make the vanilla dough, put the butter, sugar, eggs, and vanilla in a medium-sized bowl. Mix them all together until creamy. Then add the flour, salt, nutmeg, and baking soda and mix for about a minute. Wrap the dough in waxed paper and put it in the freezer until it is firm, but not frozen (about 3 hours).

To make the chocolate dough, mix the butter, sugar, and eggs together. In a separate bowl combine the cocoa and oil, then add gradually to the first mixture. Finally add the flour, salt, and baking soda and mix for a minute. Put the dough in the freezer until firm.

When the two batches of dough become firm, take some of each kind out of the freezer. Form your animals on an ungreased cookie sheet. You can cut the dough into shapes or squeeze and shape it with your hands.

Bake the "zoo" for 10 minutes at 400° F. Then chew the critters up.

Local craftsmen fill barn with country crafts

BY SUZANNE KEENE

EAST EARL — 'Tis the season...for craft bazaars. Homemade signs advertising pre-holiday sales that feature down-home cooking and country crafts are sprouting up everywhere.

Such a sign appears outside the barn of an East Earl farm today. And inside the barn on Kal-Kilm Farm are nearly 2,000 handmade articles ranging from tree ornaments to country furniture

The bazaar is the work of 13 area craftsmen, including Betty Zimmerman, Erma Trupe and Audrey Koller, the three who set the work in motion in April. Betty said the three of them decided a bazaar would be a good way to market the many crafts they produce throughout the year.

Each of the three women asked someone to join the group and before long they were all making crafts in earnest for the sale.

"We were selective in who we asked," Betty said, explaining that they were searching for good quality work without duplication.

During the past several weeks the pace has been close to frantic, with craft making taking precedence over housework.

"My husband is ready for our kitchen to be returned to a kitchen," Betty confesses, explaining that the kitchen houses her makeshift workshop.

In fact, Betty's husband, Harry, had to offer a helping hand with staining and painting some of the wooden items.

"She had so much to do that she was never going to get done," he said.

Things at Erma's house were much the same. "My work area is pretty messy. I'm ready to clean it up," Erma says. And, she added a bit sheepishly, for the first time in 34 years of marriage her husband was at a loss for a clean shirt.

But despite the headaches, "It's fun," they quickly agree.

Betty concentrated her efforts on producing wooden items, including stenciled boards and welcome signs. "I've always had an interest in crafts," she says.

Many of her ideas come from magazines and from items in craft shops, but others just pop into her head.

"It's fun to sit down and see what's going to come out," she said. And usually, "I'm proud of them," she says of the results.

Erma, who operates a shop from her home, made wreaths and table centerpieces for the bazaar. She operates Tru Originals, a shop specializing in floral arrangements, from her home in New Holland.

While she never had any formal training in flower arranging, Erma produces beautiful floral creations. "I just do it my way," she says.

An avid cook, Erma also made seven kinds of candy, including fudge, church windows and chocolate mints, as well as cheese balls and jellies to sell at the bazaar.

Bazaar shoppers are offered complimentary hot cider and pretzels and are encouraged to sign a guest book. The guest book, Betty explained, will provide a mailing list for next year's bazaar.

In addition to making the crafts, the women had to prepare the Zimmerman's barn to house the bazaar. First, they had to persuade Harry to move out all his farm equipment and "a year's worth of junk." The Zimmermans milk 50 Holsteins on their farm, which has been in the family for over 100 years.

Once the equipment was cleared, they swept cobwebs from the rafters, cleaned the floor and arranged the hay bales for display.

Advertising was another chore the women tackled themseleves. They printed 3,000 flyers advertising the bazaar and distributed them "everywhere" they went — in doctor's offices, the hospital, local stores and in parking lots. They also contacted area newspapers and asked for feature stories and announcements.

"We got out there and really worked," Erma stressed.

The bazaar will take place today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m at the Zimmerman's farm. To find the farm follow Route 23 East from Lancaster and continue through New Holland and Blue Ball. Turn left onto Route 897. The farm is located on the right about one mile north of Route 23 just past the Weaverland Mennonite Church.

The Gift of Imagination

"Mommy, see my friend?" questioned Amy, my two-year-old niece. After looking around and asking a few questions herself, my sister realized that Amy was talking about an "imaginary friend." And at a recent visit to our home, Amy disclosed that her friend's name is "Eggie" (I hope that is spelled correctly!) and he lives in the jeep in the garage. And sporatically, especially when drawing or coloring, Amy includes Eggie in her ongoing chatter.

Having an imaginary friend is not unusual. If you've recently had a conversation with a preschooler, you probably noticed the free tense of imagination that is typical for children of this age. They are capable of telling quite far-fetched stories, putting themselves into the roles of other family members and creating imaginary friends, among other things. The outside world is new to them and they find many creative ways of bringing it down to their own level.

Unfortunately, experts tell us that when a child begins school, he is often faced with regimented thinking, standard activities, and the one and only "right" way to do things. Without creative and flexible teachers, that keen imagination is sure tof ade.

Parents can be helpful in strengthening creativity while it is at its peak by helping the child focus it on productive activities. Granted, this may take some extra patience and understanding, but the benefits to the child are certainly worth it.

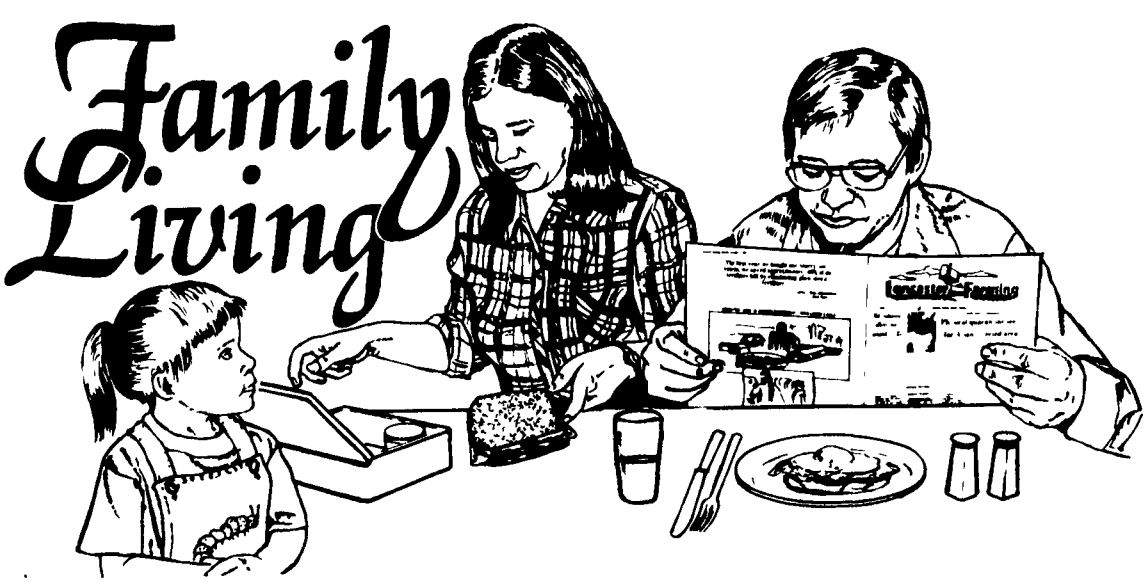
My uncle shares the story of the day the family was packing into the car for a trip back home to Pennsylvania. However, they couldn't leave until he got out of the car, opened the garage door and allowed the imaginary friend to get out and come along. Sometimes it is difficult enough to take care of regular family members, let alone invisible ones, but it can be managed.

Imaginary friends are actually quite common. One study says 20 percent of all children have them. They tend to be very real to the child and are created for a number of reasons, including: a scapegoat, ("I don't do it–Allen (the friend) did it!") or as an extra conscience ("Allen and I decided what to do"), or as an escape from a too stressful or too dull reality ("Allen taught to fly over the house today").

Probably the best way for parents to handle these friends is to acknowledge them, but to give the child more and more responsibility for the friend's actions and needs. For example, "If Allen spills his milk, you and Allen will have to clean it up."

When preschool children begin to master language, they seem to talk non-stop from the waking moment to bedtime. Sometimes they talk just to hear the words and may experiment with sounds by making up new words, probably as Amy did in naming her friend "Eggie." That is a creative use of language and will eventually help in learning to read. A game that parents and children can play together to help strengthen this creative thinking is to make up stories to tell aloud, or make up new endings to familiar story books. Older children will enjoy making up a family story. One person starts and each one adds an episode to create a bizarre plot. This is an especially good activity for long distance traveling or sitting around the meal table.

The preschool imagination is a wonderful gift that is worth fostering. Imaginative adults are rewarded highly in the work world because so few have managed to preserve it that long. You must agree that the problems our children will have to solve by the year 2000 will take lots of creativity. Who knows, but "Eggie" is probably just a glimpse of Amy's imagination to come.



Victorian quill art for your keepsakes

BY WENDIE R. BLANCHARD
Copley News Service

Quilling is the art of rolling, gluing and shaping narrow strips of paper into beautifully personalized designs. The craft was invented by French and Italian nuns who used featherless quills to roll narrow strips of delicate paper trimmed by hand form the gilt edges of book pages–hence the name "quilling."

Today the strips come already precut for you, and the tool has been updated to the use of a corsage pin or special quilling tool (a needle-type shank in a wooden handle).

The designs available are more attractive and plentiful than ever before. You can create your own heirlooms from wedding invitations or birth announcements, or add a touch of Victorian flair to any treasured keepsake now tucked away in your family chest.

Here's what you need:

Items you will want to get–Quill art precut quilling paper (available at craft shops) in ivory, soft white, dark brown, light brown.

Items you may have at home–5-by-7-inch rectangular frame (ivory) for wedding border; wedding invitation card; corsage pin, hat pin or quilling tool; ruler; wax paper; tape; white craft glue; round toothpicks; tweezer; clear acrylic spray; pins; porous piece of working board.

Quilling techniques: The size of your rolls will depend on the length of paper strips and on how tightly you roll them.

Before starting a design, practice rolling the different pieces. Getting the right tension at the beginning of the roll will make all the difference. Beginners often run into trouble on three counts: difficulty in starting the roll on the quilling pin or tool, rolling too tightly, and rolling unevenly.

Don't be disappointed if your first attempts fall short of the mark. With a little practice you can learn to make perfect rolls and create lovely designs.

The easiest method is to take four or five strips of quilling paper at a time, and measure and tear off the length required for the pattern. Begin by rolling each of the strips. After you have rolled all of the strips, glue the ends and form into shapes desired, in a single operation.

Paper strips should be torn, rather than cut with scissors, because a torn end is less noticeable when glued.

Take a strip of paper, with the end between the thumb and index finger; then using your thumb, roll the end of the strip around the quilling pin or tool. If you have trouble starting your roll, try moistening your fingertips.

The beginning of each roll should be wound tightly to make a tiny center. Then relax tension and roll the rest of the strip. Let coil pop open on tool, then let coil slide off tool. After all coils are made, glue ends of strips, using a small amount of glue and a toothpick.

Use this technique to make the following basic shape. Glue shape closed in either a loose roll or a tight roll. Make sure to glue the tight roll before removing from pin.

To make the eye design, gently pinch opposite sides of loose circle, leaving round filigree in center.

To achieve the curved petal, pinch opposite sides of loose circle, pushing in opposite directions to curve piece as pictured.

To make a tendril, roll strip almost to end, then use quilling pin to gently loosen roll to form a soft curl.

To make your full design, lay wax paper over the invitation. Working on top of the wax paper, glue the pieces to each other but not to the protective wax paper covering. With the tip of a toothpick, apply a little bit of glue to the points where pieces touch.

After completing your design, you may wish to spray the quill work with a clear acrylic spray. This will seal the paper, enrich the color somewhat and give a protective finish to the whole design.

Remember, if your frame's exterior measurements are 5 inches by 7 inches, your working area for the invitation card actually will be only about 4½ inches by 6¼ inches.

It's time for kids to enter USDA's food safety poster contest

WASHINGTON, D.C. – The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently announced the opening of its sixth annual Food Safety Poster Contest for elementary school students.

The theme of the contest is "Food Safety Adds Up To Good Health–You Can Count On It."

"This year's theme emphasizes basic math skills to teach students how to protect themselves from food poisoning," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "The teaching kits we are mailing this month to all elementary schools contain instructional materials explaining that food safety is dependent on proper cooking times and temperatures and on safe storage temperatures."

Houston said that students participating in the contest will learn, for example, that leaving perishable food at room temperature for more than two hours invites trouble. Bacteria that cause food poisoning double in number every 20 minutes or so, Houston explained, and at temperatures in the 85-100°F range, some food poisoners multiply even faster.

"After children have learned these basic rules of food safety," Houston said, "they will be able to write slogans and draw posters illustrating the relation between food safety and math."

Lancaster Farm Women elect new officers at County Convention

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LANCASTER–Lancaster County Society of Farm Women held their 68th annual convention at the Farm and Home Center on Nov. 2 with about 450 members of Lancaster's 35 societies participating.

Elected to serve as second vice-president of the county group was Mrs. Florence Vaitl, Ephrata. A member of Society #3, Florence has belonged to Farm Women for 18 years. Moving up to president will be Mrs. Mary Shellenberger, Columbia, a member of Society #4. Mrs. Hazel Ulrich, Lititz, will become first vice-president. She belongs to Society #1.

Mrs. Judy Greenleaf, Society #15, remains as secretary, and Mrs. Betty Geib, #2, continues as treasurer.

As their county project, the 35 societies made a contribution of $3155 to the Farm and Home Foundation of Lancaster County. In accepting the check from the former Farm Women president Joan Hershey, Farm and Home president Evelyn Hess said the money will be used to get new drapes for behind the stage in the auditorium. She thanked the Farm Women members for their continuing support of the Farm and Home Center, recalling their early work in getting the Center built.

Society #33 won the attendance award with 64 percent of its members present; and Society #1 was second with 62 percent present.

In other business retiring president Joan Hershey gave a report on her activities for the year, and Mary Shellenberger gave a condensed report on activities from all the Societies.

A special recognition was given to Mrs. Barbara Moore, Lititz, who is 101 years old this month, and who has attended every county Farm Women convention.

Spring flowering bulbs are easy to force, and they make great holiday gifts for friends and family.

While you are buying tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and small variety bulbs for your spring garden, think about buying some extras to pot as presents. Healthy, large sized bulbs are in good supply at most garden centers, so act while you have the chance.

Bulbs for beginners

Amaryllis and paper-white narcissus are the easiest. Paper-whites are sold loose or already potted. They need to be placed in a well-lighted area at a temperature of about 60°F. The planting medium should be kept moist but not wet. If paper-whites are planted in non-draining bowls, which is often the case, special care is needed to prevent over-watering.

Amaryllis provide a wider range of colors and forcing time than the paper-whites. They are usually sold in pre-potted packages. To start the flowering process, place the bulb in a well-lighted area and give an initial watering. Subsequent waterings should be light until the plant grows. The flower stalk should emerge before the leaves. Large bulbs can produce as many as three flower stalks.

Bulbs That Need Cold Treatment

The second group of bulbs that can be forced include tulips, hyacinths, daffodils and crocuses. Because they have a need for an annual warm-cold-warm temperature cycle, and require fairly precise handling, they present a challenge to the home forcer.

Start the forcing process by filling a standard flower pot or bulb pan to within 1 1/2 inches of the top with a potting soil made from two parts packaged soil, one part peat moss and one part vermiculite.

Set the bulbs on the soil surface and cover them with potting soil. Hyacinth, narcissus and tulip bulbs should have the tip of the bulb exposed about 1/2 inch, so you might have to adjust the planting depth slightly. Fill the pot, firm the soil and water pots well. Allow excess water to drain away.

After planting, maintain the temperature of the pot and bulbs at between 45 and 50°F for about 12 weeks, depending on the type of bulb planted. An old refrigerator in a garage or basement is a good way to control the temperature. During this time the bulbs must be kept moist. Roots penetrating through the drain hole in the bottom of the pot indicate that a strong root system has developed.

At the end of the rooting period, when you can see a strong root system, begin the actual forcing process. Move the bulbs to a temperature of 60°F in a dark location and water well. Keep the bulbs under these conditions for one to two weeks or until growth appears.

As soon as stems appear, move the bulbs to a 65°F location with as much light as possible. Windows that receive some direct sun are ideal, but you might be able to supplement natural light with fluorescent lamps. Turn the pots regularly to keep the stems growing straight. Once the plants begin to grow, you will have to water them daily to make certain they do not dry out, even slightly. They grow rapidly, so they'll need all the water you can provide.

Hardy bulbs can not be forced again the following season, but they may bloom a second year if you plant them outside as soon as the soil can be worked in the spring.

Editor's Note: Below is the fourth letter from Adams County IFYE Darlene Resh. Darlene is living and studying in Norway as part of the International 4-H Youth Exchange Program.

I am traveling by train to my fourth host family in western Norway. I can't believe the sights I'm seeing. One hour ago the hillsides were covered with beautiful fall foilage. Now we're making our way through three feet of fresh new snow.

The 5½-hour trip is over some of Norway's most rugged mountains. On my! I can't believe what I just saw! It's certainly not like Adams County, that's for sure. It's a very steep mountainside with a straight drop right into the fjord below. A spectacular sight to see.

The largest fruit producing area is in western Norway. Yes, they grow fruit trees on these steep mountains. What I didn't know as I rode the train was that I would be picking apples from some of those trees.

I picked a few apples in Adams County, but I never experienced apple picking like I did here with my host family. It's not that picking is different, but the trees are located on steep mountain sides. I would have felt a little better had I had a rope tied to me and the tree so if I fell, I wouldn't end up at the bottom of the mountain.

The mountains are terraced for the trees to be planted and an area for a tractor to park. The four-wheel drive tractor is loaded and transports the apples to the barn.

I wonder how they are able to drive a tractor at all in some places because it is so steep. The apples are picked in a two-gallon bucket and dumped into wooden half bushel crates. When we finish picking the apples, they are taken to the barn. We sort them for fresh sales, apple soft, apple juice and applesauce. The varieties of apples we picked were: Inge mari, a Christmas apple; Gravenstei, a red and yellow variety usually eaten fresh; Roma, a tart baking apple; and Prince Phillip, Summer Red and Quentn, which are used in many different apple products. Apples are not the ony fruit my host family grows on their farm. They also have plums, and sweet and sour cherries.

The weather is very rainy and conditions are not ideal for spraying fruit trees. The usual problem they face is apple scab. Sprays are applied about seven times a year for the disease. It is a very costly task, especially with rainy weather.

Onion growing was a new experience for me. I've taken part in sizing and sorting onions. My host family grows about a half acre of white onions. We took off the outside skin and cleaned them. The onions were bagged in 30-pound net bags.

They harvest a total of 12,000 pounds of onions per year. I was glad they had finished sizing and sorting the potatoes in 50-pound bags the day before I arrived. The onions, potatoes and apples are sold through the Agricultural Co-op.

I found Norwegian egg production interesting. Like many other ag-related products produced by farmers, eggs are on a production quota. Each farm has a quota! If you exceed the quota, you receive less per kilo for the eggs over quota.

This system is controlled and supported by the government in all areas of agriculture and controls over production. My family has 2,000 laying hens and we gather the eggs each day in egg baskets. The chicken house is a cage house with the cages hanging from the ceiling and conveyor manure dropping boards. Hand feeding and egg gathering is necessary. The eggs are washed each evening and cased the next morning.

The Co-op picks up the eggs once a week to be processed. The grading of eggs is almost the same as our system. One difference is every single egg is stamped with a grade. The eggs are either sold per egg or by the kilo.

Editor's Note: Below is the final letter from Lancaster County IFYE Jody Henkel. Jody is living and working in Greece as part of the International 4-H Youth Exchange Program. Anyone with questions concerning a slide presentation of her trip to Greece can call or write to her after Dec. 4 at R.D.1, Box 221, Strasburg, Pa. 17579; 717-786-2562.

Dear Friends:

This is it! I will be back in Pennsylvania on Dec. 4. The six months have quickly come to an end. What has it been like living in Greece? It's been:

- asking "Where is the toilet?" in Greek and being told it's in Northern Europe
- car horns beeping for any reason
- someone opening up their home and working beside them — picking tomatoes or transplanting cabbage
- being able to walk ½ mile into the sea and still see my feet
- hearing people speak but not understanding more than a few words
- adjusting the way you view life and people to see how Greeks view them
- places that existed long before America was a nation
- lots of sunshine!
- agriculture practiced differently
- explaining the vastness of America
- loving people and hurting when you leave
- food, food food!
- climbing hand and foot to the top of Mount Olympus
- widows dressed in black
- figuring out how the toilet works
- leaning on God at all times
- flowers everywhere
- listening to a different style of music
- donkeys and horses used as a common form of transportation for people and products
- getting used to eating at different hours
- finding out mosquitos love American blood!
- open air markets
- going for a volta, or walk, along the same 100 yards for one hour!
- lots of apples but no applesauce or apple butter
- meeting people from other countries and having friends around the world

Love, Jody

Extension director receives service award

UNIVERSITY PARK — Trudy Dougherty, Chester County extension director, received a Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of Extension Home Economist at its annual meeting held recently in San Diego.

She was honored for her contributions to increasing the funding for county extension programs and for her assistance in revising the County Board of Directors to reflect more accurately both the urban and rural needs of the county. She was also recognized for her programs in family financial management and home furnishings.

Since her appointment as county extension director four years ago, she has been able to secure additional support for program implementation, upgrading county electronic capabilities for extension programs, and reorganizing office management systems.

Trudy initiated a pre-retirement series for county employees, which resulted in national recognition for the Chester County commissioners in 1983. The commissioners honored her in 1984 with an Award of Excellence for planning and facilitating the series.

As extension director Trudy is responsible for supervising the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program, which now serves 200 families in Chester County. She initiated a learn-at-home series on family financial management, "Families Managing in the 80s," which 300 families have completed.

Trudy is responsible for directing extension programming in agriculture, community development, and 4-H youth as well as in home economics. She also produces regular newsletters and conducts programs on child development, home food preservation, nutrition and finance.

A member of the Chester County extension staff since 1973, Trudy has taught home economics at the junior and senior high school and college levels. She served as fine arts and home economics department head in the Greater Egg Harbor Regional School District and supervised student teachers from Glassboro State College.

Trudy received bachelor and master of science degrees in home economics from Drexel University, specializing in design and education. She belongs to the Philadelphia Electrical Women's Roundtable and the Chester County Nutrition Education Council. Caution With the Catalogs

Nuts from the South, fruits from the West, cheese from the North and fish from the East–all these are possible through catalogs. In fact, this year's crop of catalogs seem to be targeted to buyers by interest as well as income bracket. If you've ever bought clothes or books or things for your home by mail, or if you subscribe to nearly any magazine at all, your name probably appears on several mail order lists.

Before you give in to temptation and convenience, here are a few tips.

• Get a fix on what you would pay the same merchandise if you bought it locally. Comparison shop before you place your order.

• Buying by mail or by phone is so simple that it's easy to overspend. Always keep a running total of how much you've spent and keep a record of how you have arranged payment.

• The merchandising in catalogs is often so good that you may expect more than you actually get. Make sure you understand the exchange and return policy before you commit yourself to a purchase.

• Before you buy, know what the mailing and handling charges will be. They vary widely and some gifts may end up being much more costly than you anticipate.

• Prepare for delays. What happens if your order is not in stock or is not available in the size or color you specify? Make sure your second choice is really acceptable and give yourself plenty of time to change your option if it is not.

• Since options become more limited as the holidays approach, you may want to phone in your order and find out on the spot if your choice is in stock. If you do, whenever possible, use an 800 phone number. Otherwise your phone bill may double the cost of your gift.

Give a Safety Gift This Christmas

Give the gift of safety this year. This list is endless, from giving a child's safety seat to installing handrails on the steps and porches of someone's home.

It's a sign of love to buy a safety gift such as a smoke detector or fire extinguisher. People are often afraid to give a safety gift because they believe people will think they're strange. Our culture just isn't oriented to giving this type of gift.

Everyone can use a safety gift, perhaps a night light for the hall or bathroom, or abrasive strips for stairways and bathtubs. If you're having trouble thinking of a gift, try to remember when you saw the person doing something dangerous. Perhaps he or she was standing on a chair to reach a bowl, box or tool. If so, buy a ladder or stepstool of the appropriate height. For someone who has been storing gasoline in an unapproved container, buy an approved one.

Keep safety in mind when buying toys for children. Avoid toys with sharp edges, projections or small parts that could be swallowed. Follow the age recommendations on the package and choose toys that are well made and sturdy enough for children's play.

A different safety gift for children is membership in the Child Safety Club sponsored by the National Safety Council. Every six months, children aged three to five receive books on child safety at home, at play and in traffic. The books include puzzles and quizzes about safety and are designed to be used by parents and child together. For more information about the club, write to the National Safety Council, 444 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, IL 60611.

It's time to get fireplaces, woodstoves ready for winter

FLEMINGTON, N.J. — Fall is here! Leaves are beginning to change color. There's a chill in the evening air.

This all reminds us to remind you that it's time to check the fireplace and chimney before lighting that first fire of autumn. The same goes for a woodstove and its chimney.

The fireplace should be inspected for cracks. Hot gases can be a hazard to health and can cause a house fire.

The chimney should be checked for loose bricks and mortar. Make repairs before using the fireplace or stove.

The soot and creosote that accumulates in the chimney and connecting pipes should be cleaned out periodically. With a fireplace, once a year should be adequate. If there's a woodstove attached, you will have to clean more frequently. We urge inspections of chimneys monthly.

The cleaning can be do-it-yourself. There are wire brushes available for most all sizes and shapes of chimney flues. There are substitutes, like the young cedar tree with a rope attached top and bottom.

A commercial chimney sweep can do the job quickly, thoroughly, and with little or no mess.

Be sure the fireplace damper closes tightly, so that warm room air won't escape when the fireplace is not in use.

Select Woodstove Carefully

If you are in the market for a woodstove, choose one carefully. There are all kinds, shapes, sizes and materials. Cast iron seems to be favored, since it's durable and spreads the heat well.

Buy from a reputable dealer. Install the stove properly. And, operate the stove according to manufacturer's instructions.

Wood Selection

Fireplace and stove wood should be dried as much as possible before burning. Dry wood burns more efficiently and is not as apt to produce creosote problems.

It's best to cut and split the wood to size and store it under cover for at least six months.

Choice of wood is an important consideration. Generally, the denser the wood, the better burning quality.

The best species are hickory, black locust, sugar maple, red oak and beech. The next best category includes apple, ash, birch, cherry, elm.

Considered to be poor burning woods are white pine, hemlock, and cedar.

If you are lucky enough to have your own woodlot, it would pay to have a forester walk over the area, recommend the trees to be cut for firewood. If there's anything that has potential as saw timber, the forester can point that out.

The harvesting of firewood from the farm woodlot is an important activity. It should be done carefully, so that the quality and growth of the remaining trees will improve.

Don't forget safety when car pooling with kids

ARDMORE — Pennsylvania pediatricians urge parents to carefully consider safety precautions when car pooling children. In today's busy lifestyles, car pooling kids is a necessity. It saves gas, time, money, and aggravation, yet often parents neglect to plan for safety when working out the details of who is going to drive each day.

Most parents are well aware of child passenger safety. PennDOT research shows that 60 percent of Pennsylvania parents are now using car seats. This compares with 21 percent use in 1983.

Pennsylvania Act 53 requires that all children between one and four years of age must ride buckled up. Infants from birth to one year must be secured in a federally-approved car safety seat. Children one to four must be buckled up, either in a child restraint or in the back seat of the car in the car seat belt. Parents and legal guardians are responsible under this law.

But what happens when your child rides with someone else?

Pediatricians recommend that parents spend the time to insure that their children are protected when car pooling.

Take time to discuss the following important rules with your car pool group:

- There will not be more children than available seat belts. A car pool can only be as large as the smallest car permits.
- The car will not be started until all occupants are buckled up, including the driver.
- The children will be told that they are expected to follow your safety rules in the car, especially that they must ride buckled up and ride quietly.

Pediatrician Jerold M. Aronson notes, "Parents must be concerned about children's safety no matter who they are with or in whose car they ride. Car accidents are the number one cause of deaths and injuries of young children. In addition, most accidents happen within 25 miles of home. Let's make every ride a safe ride for children. Plan your car pool for safety first."

Parents with questions or special circumstances regarding child passenger safety can call toll free 1-800-CAR-BELT in Pennsylvania.

Brockett's Ag Advice

By John E. Brockett
Farm Management Agent
Lewistown Extension Office

Drawbacks of competition

WHY?

Recently I heard a speaker state that one of the enjoyable parts of working with farmers was their comradeship. This is a true statement, up to a point. After that point, farmers are as competitive as any other business. In fact this competitiveness sometimes gets individual farmers into financial trouble. It also may cause an entire segment of the farm sector to go out of business.

A case in point: Dairy farmers are already producing a surplus of milk, although some will say "not I–the overproducers are the other guys in California or Wisconsin," yet are eagerly waiting for their chance to use a new hormone that will dramatically increase production per cow.

Within two years after this product is on the market, most dairymen will be using it. This will obviously cause another round of surpluses. Who will pay the bill?

All remaining dairymen, of course, because who else will there be to pay the cost of surplus milk–by then consumers will say, who should we fund the folly of the farmers who are producing more milk than we can use?

Milk will probably go to $8 per hundred or less. Can dairymen stop this from happening? Probably not, because most farmers are production-oriented and do not want to know about marketing or supply and demand.

Thus there will be no enforceable effort to stop or even control the forthcoming hormone. Will there be no end to the surplus problem in agriculture? Again, probably not for the same reason.

Farmers as individuals, and as a group, are generally more interested in producing more than in the cost or return from that production.

As new products come onto the market, farmers must make some tough decisions. Should I use the product? Will it make me money? What effect will it have on me and my family? Those are some of those decisions. What can the farmer of the present do to ensure survival in the future? Here are some of the things I think will have to be done.

1. Learn how to manage finances–keep accurate and detailed records–use those records to make decision–analyze the economic benefits of new products and technology.

2. Manage debt as carefully as you would manage any other part of your farming operation–no product you can buy will help you spend or borrow your way out of trouble.

   a. Keep debt down to the point where you can pay the contract payments with farm income by knowing your "debt repayment ability."

   b. Understand that some of the rules of managing debt have been refined (not changed). Several years ago there was considerable room for error because prices were moving up or at least fairly stable. Until 1983, land prices were moving upwards at such a clip that some errors could be absorbed by borrowing against this paper equity increase. There is no longer any such flexibility.

   c. Borrow only for absolute necessities–know where the repayment money will come from before borrowing–examine each purchase carefully with the challenge "is it necessary or is it a want that I can really do without."

3. Do not get caught up in winning contests unless there is a real dollar prize at the end. Pictures in the paper and ribbon are nice but pay no bills. Even worse that winning may cause you to forget good management practices.

4. Know the cost of producing your sale product whether it is milk, corn, hogs, or strawberries. Then see where you can reduced that cost by 5 to 10% even if you are making money now. Why? Because the price of that product will (not may) go down next year and/or the cost will go up.

Survivors of the biggest farmers loss since the depression will be those who have most of the following attributes: a good debt to asset ratio; ability to produce at a cost below price; an ability to properly set priorities; an understanding of the effect of market demands on their business with the business acumen to react favorably; a reasonable cash reserve or equity reserve that can be converted to cash or an outside source of cash; the ability and fortitude to make tough decisions; and enough mental toughness to handle the pressures that will or are coming to bear on all farmers.

Suggestions

Borrow only the amount that is absolutely necessary. Do not borrow money that can not be paid off early with no penalty. Do a lot of pencil or computer pushing before you borrow anything to see if the item is necessary and/or profitable.

If you sell a capital asset such as land, equipment, or livestock, use the money to pay off debts or purchase capital assets in that order. Do not depreciate capital items faster than you debt payments pay for them. (This is for tax reasons.)

Do not get hung up on winning contests. Too many farmers look at their business as fun and games and want awards for high DHIA records or corn club yields. As one county agent said "we need these fun things to keep life enjoyable on the farm." This is true as long as the players put things in the proper perspective and remember that the monthly DHIA brag sheet is a fun thing and has no relationship with profitability or that 5 acre corn club information has no real relationship to their or anyone else's actual marketable yield or actual farm costs.

Hort Show honors to Layser

UNIVERSITY PARK – The 72nd annual Penn State Horticulture Show, opening Saturday, October 23 at the Ag Arena on the University Park Campus, is dedicated to Donald Layser, owner of Layser's Flowers in Myerstown.

Layser has been a long-time supporter of the student Horticulture Club activities. For many years he has contributed plant materials on consignment to the Hort Show and to club flower sales on the Penn State campus. Horticulture students in Penn State's College of Agriculture regularly tour his greenhouses on field trips and some get their first job in the horticultural industry as his employees.

Since purchasing his business in 1951, Layser has expanded it to include 10 acres of greenhouses and a full retail garden center. He is credited with being one of the most progressive growers in the country. Quick to adapt research in new growing techniques, greenhouse structures and energy conservation, he also has adopted sound marketing and management practices.

Layser served on the Growers Council of the Society of American Florists from 1974 to 1980 and on the board of directors of Bedding Plants Incorporated from 1980 to 1985.

Grange supports checkoff for disease-control plan

WARREN – Delegates to the Pennsylvania State Grange Convention here Tuesday adopted policy favoring a producer-funded checkoff in livestovk to fund animal disease control programs and indemnity payments for livestock killed to control disease.

The issue was one of 130 resolutions being decided this week by the 500 delegates representing local granges at the 113th annual sale meeting. Resolutions which originated from local granges will be voted on and become the state policy of the 42,000 member rural-farm group.

The State Grange also adopted policy to restrict the use of agriculture as an investment tax shelter for non-farm income, and to limit the flooding of the U.S. market with foreign, subsidized farm products, including dairy, mushrooms, honey, beef and apple juice.

The group supported continuation of the capital gains tax exemption for the forest and Christmas tree industry and called for increased staffing in the State Department of Agriculture in specific areas.

The Grange opposed the relocation of the Appalachian Trail in Cumberland County to a scenic ridge route and supported a plan to incorporate the trail into the public highway system by creating a walkway adjacent to the public roads.

In summary, the delegates took action to:

- Oppose the sale of Conrail to the Norfolk Southern Corporation or to any bidder for less than $7 billion;
- Support further study of a new high speed railroad system across the state;
- Oppose installation of seat belts on school buses;
- Oppose mandatory air bags in cars and support mandatory seat belts use legislation;
- Support legisaltion to prohibit the suing of auctions or sellers on commission from prior liens on merchandise.

Nearly 1300 Grange members from across the state attended the Grange meeting.

The Office Works can help you with your agricultural problem solving.

We have been helping farmers for three years now. That's because we know farming. Jim Landis, our agricultural computing specialist grew up on a farm and now he has a 200 acre cash crop farming operation. Our satisfied customers include dairymen, poultrymen, beef and hog farmers, county agents, feed mills, Vo-Ag teachers and other farming specialists.

Let us show you what a computer can do on the farm. We offer seminars that provide a hands-on learning experience. We'll teach you how to use a computer and show you what a computer can do for you. You'll see how a computer purchase for the farm would pay for itself! The cost for seminars is modest - $15 per couple which includes all class materials and lunch. Plus, you'll get a coupon for $100 off a computer purchase! The schedule is below. All seminars are Tuesdays from 10am-3 pm.

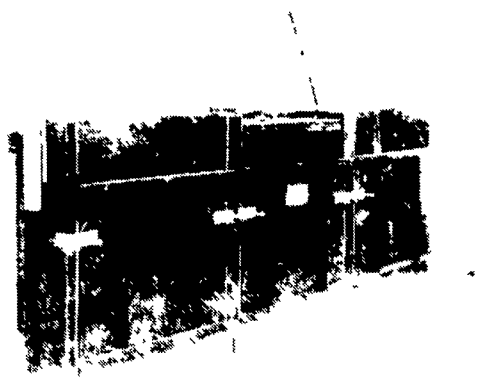
MARYLAND TOBACCO



"The Art of Baling Becomes A Reality" over the course of history. Maryland tobacco has found its way to market in a variety of forms. From barrels to burlap sheets, to tied leaves. Now, a new method has been designed which makes packed tobacco more manageable.

A baling box machine can be used which puts up tobacco in 22 inch bales that weigh 75 to 80 lbs. These can easily be stacked or stored.

The basic machine is a three-bin model where tobacco is laid in according to grade. The tobacco is compressed into bales by use of an hydraulic cylinder powered by air. A jack type system can be used for those who may not have electric available. After the bale is compressed, it must be tied with cotton twine.

The use of the three-bin press allows more tabacco to be processed in less time.

For more information and details on these new tobacco press units - Call LANCASTER SILO CO., INC. We have units in stock for sale.

Farm Talk

Farmers don't live free

It may come as somewhat of a surprise to city folk, but farmers don't live free off the land. That old idea that they freeze, pickle, smoke or otherwise preserve their entire food supply just isn't so anymore.

Sure, some farm wives still can and freeze and some farmers butcher a hog or a steer now and then and there is room for a garden, but an awful lot of what farmers eat and all of the clothes and other consumer goods they use come from the same stores where the rest of us shop. The farmer is, in fact, a very big consumer.

A survey of farm living costs shows that farm families spend their money about the same as the rest of us—four items accounted for half the total: Food took 21 percent. Life insurance and medical each took 10 percent. Clothing and personal expenses took 9 percent. Farmers spent the smallest amounts for recreation, 3 percent; education, 4 percent; and utilities, 4 percent.

A number of other factors showed up on farm spending sheets that indicate farmers aren't that different. For instance, farmers with kids in college spend more; large families and those with a working mother have higher living costs; high-income farmers spend more on family living than low-income farmers.

Farmers have one problem that most wage earners don't face. Their business and their home are the same and, in most cases, the bulk of the farm labor is supplied by the farm family. So it's difficult to separate things.

A farmer must pay his business expenses and his family living expenses out of the same gross earnings. Lately there hasn't been much left for the family after farm debts have been settled.

The farmer who doesn't know how much his family is spending may also find his wife has spent the seed and fertilizer money at the local clothing store.

The city-dwelling wage earner who finds it tough to pay the bills with his take-home pay should face the farmer's challenge. That is to pay the ever-rising cost of fuel, fertilizer, seed, hardware, parts, machinery and all the other farm inputs and still have something left for an occasional new car or vacation or for that son or daughter in college.

Not many farm wives bake bread, churn butter or pasteurize milk, so the food store is a regular stop on the way home from town.

A few diligent, hard-working and diversified farm families still produce a lot of the food they consume. They eat well regardless of the price. But the typical soybean grower or broiler producer never tastes his produce until it's been processed by someone else.

Please clean the utensils

LANCASTER — Do you have the responsibility of caring for any animals. If so, it is a job you should take seriously, says Glenn Shirk, Lancaster County agricultural agent.

Do you clean the manger or utensils frequently? Do you even use a container, a manger or a rack? Is the water bowl, the water tub, or the watering hole clean and sanitary? How would you like to eat or drink from these facilities? In a restaurant, we have the opportunity to send dirty utensils back to the kitchen. What opportunity does an animal have to return its dirty equipment to us?

Just as important as providing clean facilities and utensils in which to place feed and water, is the quality of the feed and water. Do we strive to keep it clean and fresh? Do we offer adequate amounts and do we offer it frequently enough? Do we have unfrozen water available in winter?

Attention to these concerns can help assure adequate nutrient intake by the animals we are caring for, says Shirk. And, a properly fed animal has the opportunity of being a healthier animal.

USDA provides 'background' on Farm Bill spending

Editor's Note: The "backgrounder" below, supplied by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, gives the administration's position on Farm Bill expenditures now before Congress.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate soon will debate the 1985 farm bill. One of the most important decisions will be how to match the high cost of the bill with Congressional spending targets. The latest estimates are that the farm bill reported by the Senate Agriculture Committee exceeds the $34.8-billion Congressional budget target by more than $20 billion.

ADMINISTRATION POSITION

The administration believes that the most costly budget recommendation among Committee proposals is a 4-year freeze on commodity target prices. The administration supports an amendment to freeze 1986 target prices at 1985 levels, with up to a 5 percent annual reduction in subsequent years.

The second budget priority is enactment of a 50-cents-per-hundred-pound (cwt.) reduction in dairy price supports, effective Jan. 1, 1986. The Senate Agriculture Committee's dairy provision maintains the current milk support price at $11.60 per cwt. through the 1986 milk marketing year.

BACKGROUND ON BUDGET COSTS

• The Congressional Budget Resolution that Congress passed earlier this year allocated $34.8 billion for commodity programs in fiscal 1986-88.

• Excellent crop conditions in 1985 have resulted in record production for many commodities. Export demand deteriorated this year and farm prices are down. Consequently, USDA estimates that the cost of the Senate Agriculture Committee bill would be $54 to $60 billion—exceeding the Budget Resolution by more than $20 billion.

• Based on last January's farm commodity supply-use data, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that farm price support provisions of the Senate farm bill would cost $42 billion; that exceeds the Budget Resolution targets by more than $7 billion.

BACKGROUND ON TARGET PRICE FREEZE

• The most costly provision in the Senate Agriculture Committee's farm bill is a proposal to maintain commodity target prices at their 1985 levels through crop year 1989. A 4-year freeze is estimated to cost $13 billion more than a 1-year freeze, with a 5-percent decline in subsequent years.

• To boost crop prices and control budget outlays, the 4-year target freeze would have to be accompanied by large annual acreage reduction programs.

BACKGROUND ON DAIRY PRICE SUPPORTS

• The present dairy program supports farm milk prices at $11.60 per cwt. To maintain support prices at the level, USDA's Commodity Credit Corporation purchased dairy products equivalent to 11.5 billion pounds of the Nation's record milk output in the marketing year ending Sept. 30. Dairy price supports in fiscal 1985 cost $2 billion. Government dairy purchases were up almost 30 percent from January through August this year over 1984.

• At the current price support level of $11.60 per cwt., milk production is projected by the USDA to rise to over 143 billion pounds for the 1985-86 marketing year—4 billion more than last year's record. With no change in price supports, USDA estimates that next year it will be required to purchase dairy products equivalent to more than 13 billion pounds of milk to maintain milk prices at $11.60 per cwt.

ADMINISTRATION RECOMMENDATIONS

The costs of farm price and income supports covered by the 1981 farm bill have averaged about $12 billion per year. These provisions, if extended, would average an estimated $16 billion yearly over fiscal 1986-90. The Senate Agriculture Committee farm bill would cost an estimated $17-18 billion per year. The House-passed farm bill would cost nearly as much as the Senate Committee bill.

The Senate Agriculture Committee proposal would continue dairy price supports at $11.60 per cwt. until January 1, 1987, with annual price adjustments thereafter if anticipated government dairy purchases exceed specified levels. USDA recommends that the Senate proposal be amended to provide that on Jan. 1, 1986, the support price be reduced 50 cents per cwt. if government purchases exceed 10 billion pounds. If such purchases are expected, a 50-cent-per-cwt. drop in the support price should be authorized to discourage surplus production. This amendment would generate an estimated savings of $900 million over the 4-year life of the Senate Committee bill. Further, it would increase demand for milk and dairy products.

The administration recommends that the Senate take effective action, particularly on the target price freeze and the dairy price support program, to bring spending in line with the $34.8 billion spending limit for commodity programs over the next 3 years, as approved in Congress' own fiscal 1986 Budget Resolution.

It won't last forever, but you can probably pass it on to your son.

A lot of folks learned farming behind the wheel of their Dad's Ford. More than a few still fire up that same tractor for some serious work now and then.

Today's Ford tractors use technology that Dad never dreamed of. But take a good look at one of the ten mid-sized Series 10 tractors. You'll see the lasting strength of massive castings, sturdy axles and plenty of iron everywhere it's needed.

Inside, the story is even stronger. In engines with big strong working parts and wide bearing surfaces. In husky transmissions, double-reduction final drives and sealed wet disc brakes on all models of 36 or more PTO horsepower.

That kind of design integrity has earned Ford tractors the respect of the farmers who use them. No one outranks Ford in owner satisfaction with tractors in these power sizes. That's not Ford talking - it's what farmers said in a 1983 survey measuring the quality, reliability, durability, serviceability and maintenance of their 30-90 horsepower tractors.

What's more, every Ford tractor comes with the support of a dealer with the facilities, know-how and parts availability to see that it serves you long and well.

FAS urging Germans to 'Eat and drink American'

COLOGNE, WEST GERMANY – "Eat and Drink American" is the slogan of a new campaign the U.S. food industry is launching in West Germany to promote the high quality and wide variety of U.S. foods.

The Foreign Agricultural Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture kicked off this campaign at ANUGA 1985, in Cologne, West Germany, Oct. 12-17. ANUGA (the German abbreviation for the name of a biennial German food specialty fair), is the largest food trade exhibit in the world. In 1985, it brought record numbers of trade and press representatives to see more than 2,000 U.S. food and wine items displayed at the U.S. pavilion.

"There is a prevailing idea in Germany that Americans eat fast food–hamburgers and french fries--and that's all we have to offer," says Richard Barnes, U.S. agricultural counselor to West Germany. "The U.S. exhibit here at ANUGA is changing that image."

Although foreign buyers in search of U.S. hamburgers and french fries could definitely find them at the U.S. exhibit, there were hundreds of other items to tempt foreign buyers--from homemade chocolate chunk cookies, chocolate covered pecans, raisins, wild rice, and kiwi-flavored popcorn to prime steaks, raspberries, orange juice, and turkey breast.

"We need to change the Germans' perception of U.S. foods, and to make them more aware of U.S. high quality products," said Hilton Settle, U.S. agricultural trade officer and exhibit manager for ANUGA, who worked almost a year planning the campaign.

"We are directing the program mainly at consumers," said Settle. "Through advertisements, retail and restaurant promotions, and magazine articles, we emphasize the culinary aspects of U.S. foods." The articles–in both consumer and trade press–often feature recipes on how to prepare U.S. foods.

"So far, the new campaign is a rousing success," said Settle. "We hope it will generate the type of interest in U.S. foods and U.S. cooking in Germany that is taking place in the United States, where American regional cooking is curently in vogue."

The ANUGA exhibit was the logical place to launch such a campaign, Settle said. "More than 75 countries use national pavilions to show off the best of their country's agricultural production and bounty. The U.S. exhibit is notable for its wide variety and large number of visitors."

"We continue to look at ANUGA as a prime vehicle for promoting U.S. food products, particularly, value-added items," said Barnes.

Barnes said the recent drop in the value of the dollar against European currencies is making many U.S. exhibitors optimistic about exporting.

"Backed by our new 'Eat and Drink American' campaign and our team of enthusiastic exporters showing some of the highest quality food products in the world, we're helping to change the way the world looks at U.S. food," said Barnes.

Md. Ag Forum hosts de la Garza

COLLEGE PARK, MD. – Next week's twentieth annual Maryland Agricultural Leaders Forum at College Park will feature a Monday morning appearance by U.S. Congressman E. (Kika) de la Garza (D-Tex.), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

De la Garza is scheduled to present the forum's major address, beginning at 10 a.m. And he will stay for a panel discussion set for 11 o'clock. Congressman de la Garza's speech will be titled "The Responsibility for Agriculture in the Space Age." The panel topic will be "Influencing the Future of Agriculture Through the Political Process."

Moderating the Monday morning panel in which Congressman de la Garza is scheduled to participate will be Earl H. Brown, professor of agricultural and resource economics at the University of Maryland. Dr. Brown is an Extension specialist on agricultural policy and international trade.

Other panel members include Robert L. Thompson, assistant secretary for economics at the U.S. Department of Agriculture since March 1985; Bruce L. Gardner, professor of agricultural and resource economics at the University of Maryland; James C. Barr, chief executive officer for the National Milk Producers Federation; and Carol Tucker Foreman, president of Foreman and Company, a Washington, D.C.-based public policy and consulting firm.

Monday's twentieth annual Ag Forum will be held in the Firefighters room on the second floor at the Center of Adult Education at the University of Maryland campus in College Park.

During a noon luncheon, Dr. John S. Toll, university president, will present Certificate of Merit Awards in Agriculture to four veteran leaders on the Maryland agricultural scene.

Crop expert honored

UNIVERSITY PARK,PA – Melvin Brown, crop management coordinator in the Department of Agronomy at Penn State, received a Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

Brown received the award for his leadership in extension programs in agronomy in Centre County.

A senior extension agent for the Penn State Cooperative Extension Service, Brown was reassigned last year from the Centre County Extension Office to University Park to take responsibility for extension's support of the Pennsylvania Crop Management Associations. Crop management associations were formed by farmers to employ crop technicians for soil sampling, weed surveys and other services. The results of these tests are complied into an efficient crop production plan for each farmer.

Brown established the first known Crop Management Association in Centre County in 1979, which has saved farmers thousands of dollars by improving crop management practices and record keeping of crop productions. Services to farmers include assistance with crop record keeping, computerized crop records, insect, disease and week identification and monitoring, yield, population and grain moisture checks, and sprayer calibrations.

Brown's work in Centre County led to the formation of Crop Management Associations in Bedford, Blair-Huntingdon, Columbia, Franklin, Lehigh-Northampton, and Sullivan-Bradford Counties. Since last year the number of associations has doubled. The 14 crop management associations are now serving approximately 400 farmers and have led to the formation of the state-wide Pennsylvania Crop Management Association.

In addition, Brown has established a number of crop demonstration plots as educational tools. He has conducted seminars on storage and handling and grain marketing and has carried out programs in 4-H livestock, farm management, dairy cattle housing and beef cattle production. Brown and a committee of farmers and agribusinesses have planned and sponsored an annual crops day meeting in Centre Countgy for the past 10 years.

Brown received a bachelor of science degree in agriculture education and a master's degree in extension education, both from Penn State. He is a member of the Pennsylvania and National County agents Associations, Alpha Tau Alpha, Gamma Sigma Delta and Epsilon Sigma Phi honorary societies.

Know your mail order rights

NEWARK, Del. – "Ordering by mail can be great," says Pat Wilson, Delaware State College extension home economist. "Shoppers can buy items unavailable at local stores, save time and sometimes money. But ordering merchandise by mail and having it arrive six months late–or never–can be a real headache."

The Federal Trade Commission gives consumers certain rights when ordering by mail, says Wilson. Consumers have the right to know when they can expect merchandise to be shipped. "If an ad says a mail order company will 'rush' a sewing kit in less than a week, then it must be shipped within that time," she explains. If a company doesn't specify a date, an order must be shipped within 30 days.

Wilson says customers must be notified of shipping delays, given a chance to cancel orders and get full refunds, and be supplied with free means by which to reply--for example, postage-paid postcards. Customers may cancel their orders, agree to new shipping dates, or not reply. When no reply is received, a mail order company assumes a delayed shipping date is acceptable. However, if a shipping delay will be more than 30 days, customers must give their expressed consent to the delay. Otherwise, a company must return the money at the end of the first 30 days of a delay.

If a customer chooses to cancel an order, a company must mail a refund within seven business days after the cancellation. In the case of a credit sale, a company has one billing cycle in which to adjust an account.

The FTC rule does not cover services such as mail order photo finishing, magazine subscriptions, serial deliveries (except for the initial shipment), mail order seeds and growing plants, "collect on delivery" orders, and credit orders when a customer's account is not charged prior to shipment of merchandise.

"Sometimes a person receives merchandise in the mail that wasn't ordered," says Wilson. "Federal law states that it may be considered a gift. It's illegal for a company to pressure for return of such merchandise or to send a bill. Only free samples which are clearly marked as such and merchandise mailed by charitable organizations asking for contributions can be sent legally through the mail without a person's prior consent."

If a mail order company doesn't comply with the FTC rule, Wilson recommends that a person first write to the company directly. If there is no response, send a copy of the advertisement and a short letter outlining the facts to: Director, Bureau of Consumer Protection (MO-P); Federal Trade Commission; Washington, D.C. 20580.

Income more important than credit, PFU head says

HARRISBURG — Any federal assistance for the nation's troubled cooperative Farm Credit System would be useless without an accompanying provision to restore profitability to agriculture so farmers can repay their debt, James Brown, president of the Pennsylvania Farmers Union said this week in testimony before the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit and Rural Development.

Leaders of each of the 20 state Farmers Union organizations spoke out simultaneously, unanimously calling for farm income as the answer to the nation's farm and lending crisis.

"Farmers Union is totally supportive of assistance for the Farm Credit System provided that plan at the same time calls for restoring farm income to farm families so they can repay their debt," Brown said.

"Unless there is a turn-around on the income front, things will be worse next year and an even bigger bail-out will be needed. We don't believe that either Congress or the taxpayers would or should support that," he said.

In testimony before the Congressional subcommittee, NFU President Cy Carpenter said, "We recognize the fact that, if we are to keep a substantial number of farmers in business, some emergence action by the Congress, the Administration, and the lending institutions will be necessary. Even if Congress were to pass the best possible farm bill this year, the price and income provisions of the bill would not be effective until at least the middle of next year, and that will be too late for many farmers.

"Recognizing the need for emergency action, however, is not a blanket endorsement of a simple 'bail-out' of the lending institutions, cooperative or private. We will oppose any measure that simply, and only temporarily, bails out the lending institutions and leaves farmers without the prospect of some improvement in commodity prices and income,' Carpenter tesified.

A bail-out of the Farm Credit System or any other lending institution would not change the financial situation of a single Pennsylvania farmer, Brown said.

"Ask any farmer in Pennsylvania today to define his or her problem, and he or she will answer that it is not credit, it is income. We recognize the absolute necessity for credit, but only in proper balance with other factors," Brown said.

Brown pointed out that commodity prices are running 20 to 25 percent below a year ago, national net farm income is expected to drop to between $23 and $27 billion this year, farm purchasing power is 16 percent below a year ago, and farmers' return on equity is expected to be negative for the fifth consecutive year.

"That is why income must be the foundation for building the farm financial system back to health," he said.

In the short term, Farmers Union recommends the following assistance for the nation's struggling lenders and their farming clients.

- Where necessary, agricultural banks should be assured of obtaining adequate loan funds at reasonable costs through the Federal Reserve System.
- Congress must increase the Farmers Home Administration's appropriations for low interest direct operating loans.
- Congress must provide direct appropriations for interest rate buydowns.
- A federally chartered corporation should be established to assume temporary control of farm and ranch land which has been foreclosed or forfeited to any lending institution. (There must be adequate safeguards written into any law to protect the interests of the previous owner. Lease and/or purchase of any land held by the corporation must be made only to individual farm operators, with the first rights to the previous owner and second rights to beginning farmers.)

Case names new marketing head

RACINE, WI — William T. Smith has been named director, international marketing for J I Case Company. The announcement was made by John A. Borden, executive vice president.

Smith, formerly director of product distribution for Case, replaces John S. Kelly, who died suddenly on October 15.

Smith will be responsible for Case's international marketing operations outside of North America and Europe, including Africa/Middle East, Asia/Pacific, Latin America, Australia and South Africa. He will report directly to Borden.

Smith joined Case earlier this year from International Haravester after Case's parent company, Tenneco Inc., purchased the IH North American and European agricultural assets. He had been vice president of asset management for the former IH Ag Equipment Group.

In 1981, Smith joined IH as director manufacturing/materials systems development. Previously, he worked for Massey Ferguson Ltd., Toronto, and was employed by White Motor Corporation, as vice president of manufacturing and general plant manager in Brantford, Ontario. Prior to that he was employed by Bucyrus-Erie.

Greetings From Lancaster Farming

Farming today is a multi-billion dollar business. Farming Lancaster style has proved most successful, statistics from years back prove

Not for several score years has any weekly publication dedicated itself to, or devoted itself to Lancaster Farming It is a system that needs reporting It is a system that needs to be made known to the farmer in other parts of the nation Such is the intent of LANCASTER FARMING, to serve the entire lower Susquehanna River Valley Here is a "trade paper," devoted to the interests of the farmer, to report his activities, to help others, to keep the farmer informed on what affects him.

There are hundreds of meetings throughout the area each year that directly influence the farmer Scores of others have a direct or indirect bearing Such is our purpose, to provide between two covers news that interests the agriculturalist.

Emphasis will be on meetings, on sales, on crop and weather conditions, ligislation — state and national —, markets, marketing a clear, concise, condensed fact sheet There is no pledge to paint only a rosy picture, for the policy will be to report the facts as they fall, to keep the rader informed on what is a factor in his business.

Farming is costly One economist places the minimum figure for capital needed by the prospective farmer at $35,000 his own money livestock, machinery, farm land, if any, plus rented land and money he can borrow. Usually it will take more The average American farm has about $14,000 invested per farm worker, while industry figures $13,200 It takes money to farm.

Every facility we can muster, from well qualified staff to the best in mechanics, will be put to use for you, to make LANCASTER FARMING tops in its field, an industrious field that since the turn of the century has not had adequate, close-to-home coverage

Some facts may not be pleasant, but we'll do our best to keep you advised as to conditions here and elsewhere

It's your paper LANCASTER FARMING is designed to serve you We welcome you as readers We invite your comments

Lancaster Farming Launched, Serving Area's Agriculture

Lancaster Farming today makes its initial appearance as the newest publication in Southeastern Pennsylvania to serve agriculture specifically.

For many, many years this region has been recognized as one of the most outstanding agricultural sections of the nation, even the world But not for many decades has there been a publication specifically for the farmer, no publication that has served as a clearing house for news the farmer needs

Such is the purpose of Lancaster Farming, whose ideals and goals are set forth in today's editorial columns.

High Qualified Staff

To do any job, men and equipment are needed. Octoraro Newspapers, which include the Quarryville Sun and the Christiana Public Ledger, published by Alfred C Alspach, have worked closely with the farmer on a local basis, but the need for concentrated timely news from the wider agricultural front has not been fully recognized until today

Highly qualified personnel, those who have worked closely with the farmer and the farm supply trade, have been selected. Some are actual farm owners. All have had close contact with the farming field Their biographies will be found on page three.

Starting first with the news that interests the farmer, Lancaster Farming's staffmen will assemble their stories through equipment that is tops in the field of publishing to present a readable, interesting, valuable paper

All Phases Covered

Production and marketing are but two phases of the vast agricultural picture In between are many other moves, from plowing to planting to cultivating and harvesting Facilities of other agencies too will be used, to knit together a clear picture of whats what today in the farm field.

All will be covered

Charter subscribers to Lancaster Farming will receive special consideration

We're working with you — for you Your assistance will be sincerely appreciated, your comments welcomed

To Lancaster Farming

When we consider the many things that have created and maintained a great agriculture in Pennsylvania we look back to its beginning, two and a half centuries ago Custom and tradition have a big share, but real progress comes from practical experience based on the trial and error methods of experimentation for improvement, plus the spreading of the information obtained

Among the various methods for dissemination of agricultural information are the spoken and the written or printed word Farm papers and magazines hold an important place in the advancement of agriculture Accurate and timely instruction or methods, research, marketing and production reports are essential to present day farming

Lancaster County agriculture is outstanding in the State and in the Nation Farmers of the county, since the first settlers, have attained enviable records They have been through the school of experience and will continue to profit from the findings of others, I am sure

W. L Henning
Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Office of the Secretary

WASHINGTON

Mr Ernest J Neill, Editor,
Lancaster Farming,
Quarryville, Pa.

Dear Mr. Neill:

Agricultural journalism is vitally important to the farmer, the farm wife and their children.

It keeps them abreast of the technological progress of their industry, of market trends, social developments, the workings of government and all else pertaining to the multitude of things which affect today's rural households.

Agricultural journalism promotes the "oneness" of all our citizens, city dwellers and rural people, producers and consumers. It is a bridge between R.F D. and Main Street

For many generations the people of agriculture have looked to their farm journals for rewarding information, entertainment and education

It is a pleasure to welcome Lancaster Farming to this lively and useful field of journalism.

Sincerely yours,
Signed
Ezra Taft Benson

Case International 4WD Tractors - Not Articulated

They offer more with 4-way selective steering and exclusive monitoring system that conquers any condition.

All four Case International 4-wheel drive tractors have the exclusive Intelligence Center. This advanced monitoring system tells you engine and PTO RPM, ground speed, acres worked per hour and much more at a glance Optional True Ground Speed Sensor tells you the percent of wheel slippage so you can weight your tractor correctly and choose the most efficient gear and speed.

Exclusive Four-Way Selective Steering Is Also Standard
(1), Front-wheel steer as easy as your car. (2), Rear-wheel steer for quick implement hook-ups (3), Coordinated steering lets you make sharp, full-power turns. (4), Crab steering puts each tire in a separate track for maximum traction, especially important in sloping terrain.

Silent Guardian Cab increases efficiency and productivity by providing a more comfortable environment Makes long days seem shorter.

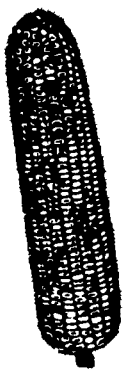
CORN DOWN? Worried About Custom Operators Getting Around To You?



CONSIDER THIS...

- Why spend $1,000's for custom combining and have nothing but your crop to show for it?
- Buy a combine priced below wholesale from Hoober's this year and harvest your own crop.
- This combine is already depreciated, so sell it next year for what you paid for it this year - all you're out is the interest.

Make Sense?

CALL US TODAY & BE HARVESTING YOUR CROP TOMORROW!

OMC's 596 Series II and 590 Roll Balers make consistently high-quality, high-density bales. No belts, no forming chains, no nonsense--just trouble free bales
Superior 595 Series II/590 features include:

- Uniform bales 5' by 6' that weigh about 1500 lbs. or 4' by 4' bales weighing about 850 lbs. (depending upon crop and conditions)
- Steel rolls with 3000 psi of hydraulic pressure form high-density, weather-resistant bales for higher quality feed
- Easily handles hay, corn stalks, forage, bean stalks, maize and sudan
- Can bale at optimum moisture conditions to retain more leaves
- Medium density core allows for additional curing in the bale
- Pressure-relief valve won't let baler over-fill

Lewis repeats win in Lancaster 4-H Sheep Roundup

BY JACK HUBLEY

MANHEIM — Sixteen-year-old Ellen Lewis of Mount Joy nearly duplicated her 1984 performance by winning supreme champion breeding sheep honors at last Saturday's Lancaster County 4-H Sheep Roundup, held at the Manheim Farm Show grounds.

Campaigning a yearling ewe she purchased from Charlie Bedinger of Illinois, the daughter of George and Lorraine Lewis took champion honors in the Hampshire show before going on to take the show's top award over all five breeds exhibited.

Though the ewe placed high in her class at the Eastern National Livestock Expo, "this is the first time she's been named champion this year," said the Hempfield High School junior.

Miss Lewis also exhibited the show's champion bred-and-owned ewe, a daughter to last year's roundup champion.

Dorset — Carey Donches

Shropshire — Arlisa Snavely, daughter of Jim and Arlene Snavely, Lancaster.

Southdown — Mark Tracy, 9, son of Gerald and Helen Tracy, Elizabethtown.

The 1985 champion market lamb was a homegrown 129-pound wether shown by Michelle Mylin, daughter of Jay and Carol Mylin, Manheim. The win marked her first county roundup market lamb championship.

The last time Mylin and Lewis squared off at Manheim was during last month's Manheim Farm Show when the two reversed roles, Michelle winning supreme breeding sheep honors and Ellen going home with the market lamb championship.

Exhibiting the reserve champion market lamb was Phil Yeagley, 15, of Elizabethtown. The son of Elvin and Jestena Yeagley won with a 105-pound Suffolk-cross wether purchased from Greystone Manor Farms of Leola.

Capping the show was the selection of 10 4-H project lamb contenders for the upcoming Farm Show. Placing the show and selecting the Farm Show entries was Tim Hall of Dalmatia (Northumberland Co.). A list of Farm Show exhibitors follows.

1. Ellen Lewis, Mount Joy
2. Mark Tracy, Elizabethtown
3. Tim Engle, Elizabethtown
4. Deb Martin, Conestoga
5. Phil Yeagley, Elizabethtown
6. Tricia Sadd, Manheim
7. Diane Musser, Elizabethtown
8. Tricia Musser, Elizabethtown
9. Lisa Sadler, Elizabethtown
10. Pam Yeagley, Elizabethtown

This Hampshire ewe, shown by Ellen Lewis, was named supreme champion breeding sheep over the five breeds exhibited.

Poultry consumption at a glance

Occasionally we need to stop, step back from the day to day activity of the poultry industry and study general industry trends. Table 1 presents the per capita consumption values for broilers and turkeys.

The consumption of broiler meat in the United States has more than doubled in the past 25 years. Although the absolute increase in turkey consumption is not as great as for broilers, on a percentage basis the increase for turkey is almost as great. An important factor is that the increase in per capita poultry consumption has been rather constant over the 25-year period. Most importantly for the poultry industry, this growth in poultry meat consumption is expected to continue due to inexpensive product prices, the development of new, easily-prepared poultry products, and due to consumer recognition of the nutritional value of poultry products.

Broiler consumption has been spread rather evenly throughout the year, while turkey consumption was once considered a seasonal item. The 1960 to 1985 increase in turkey consumption has occurred in part through an increase in consumption in the first three quarters of the year. The varity of turkey products resulting from further processing has been very instrumental in the acceptance of turkey by the consumer at times other than Thanksgiving and Christmas. Table 2 presents the product form for broilers and turkeys in select years.

Particularly interesting from Table 2 is the dramatic change in product form for turkeys during the past five years. Currently almost one-half of the turkeys are being purchased in further processed form while only one-fourth are being purchased as whole birds.

RALEIGH, NC – Fifty-five exhibitors led out 87 entries in the Charolais breed's Area 7 Roll of Excellence Show here on Oct. 21. Judging the show was Dan Hoge of Kewannee, Ill.

As grand champion bull, Hoge selected Immortal, a joint entry from Windy Hills Charolais Ranch of Commerce, Ga., and Bermidkin Farms of Wagener, S.C. Immortal is a May two-year-old son of ABC Iceman 811 and was the day's senior champion.

Following into the reserve grand champion spot was the junior champion, RCC Royal Hallmark 4703. Exhibited by Royal Charolais Co. of Greensburg, Pa., and Paul Miller & Family of Spring Grove, Pa., Hallmark is a May 1984 son of RCC Royal Constructor I.

In the female show, the cow/calf champion pair made their way to the winner's circle. JC Silhouette D3 053 and her June heifer calf, GM CF Miss Sylvia 543, were named grand champions for Greg McMillen and Cramblett Charolais Farms, both of Carrollton, Ohio. Silhouette is a two-year-old sired by Riverwood Ironclad 4258, and her heifer calf at side is out of Stone-Del Rocky 306.

White Marsh Farm of Woolford, Md., claimed the reserve grand champion female banner on WMF Shannon 854. Named senior champion earlier in the show, she is a May 1984 daughter of Rio Grande 342.

Claiming the division winnings in the bull show were Stone-Del Farms of Hartville, Ohio, and Empire Breeders of Canandaigua, N.Y., with the reserve senior champion, Stone-Del Rocky 306. The reserve junior championship went to Double D Ranch of Coshocton, Ohio, on their entry. Double D Zeus 4330.

Windy Hills Charolais Ranch and Bayvue Farms of Bay, Mo., teamed up on Bayvue's Cheer to win the calf championship. This Colossus son is a September yearling. A High-Rise son from Royal Charolais Co. took the Reserve Calf honors. RCC Royal High-Roller is a January bull calf.

Royal Charolais had another division winner, this time the junior champion of the female show. RCC Royal Heiress 4934 is a January heifer calf sired by RCC Royal Constructor I. The reserve junior championship went to Ann Nichols of Ankeny, Iowa, on Iowna Miss Utopia.

In the group competition, Royal Charolais Co. fared well, taking first place in the Get-of-Sire, Breeder's Herd and Group of Five classes.

Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference slated for Dec. 18

This year's Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference officers and committee chairman are (clockwise from lower right) David L. Conrad, general chairman; H. Travis McPherson, arrangements; Lynn Hoffman, vice chairman; Joel C. Myers, treasurer; W. Max Buckel, hospitality; Wallace T. Garrett, program; and Douglas Tregoning, tickets.

COLLEGE PARK, Md. – With two spin-off meetings getting started next January and February for farmers in the Delaware Valley and Delmarva peninsula areas, the ever-popular Mid-Atlantic No-Till Conference again will lead off the winter season of farmer educational meetings serving the Chesapeake Bay watershed.

The twelfth annual six-state event is scheduled this year on Dec. 18 at the Maryland State Fairground in Timonium.

Some 35 commercial exhibitors will be on hand, and a lineup of six speakers has been obtained. This year's conference theme is "No-Till–A Best Management Practice."

In line with the theme, three of the morning program topics are related to manure management and groudwater quality. These will be followed by a presentation on managing hard-to-control weeds in corn and soybeans and another on "No-Tillage Insecticides for the 1990's."

The latter two assignments will be handled respectively by Dr. E. Scott Hagwood, Jr., an Extension plant pathologist at Virginia Tech, and Dr. J. Lee Hellman, an Extension entomologist at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Dr. John F. Marten, staff economist for Farm Journal magazine of Philadelphia, will round out the morning session with a talk on "Marketing Grain Under the Farm Bill."

The afternoon session will offer opportunity to visit commerical exhibits in the 4-H and Home Arts building on the fairground or to meet morning program speakers in a "Quiz the Experts" session at nearby Exhibition Hall.

Tickets for the noon luncheon are available at $3 each from county offices of the Cooperative Extension Service in Maryland, Delaware, Ne4w Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia. They must be purchased in advance of the meeting–and not later than Dec. 6.

Early arrivals will have opportunity for visiting commercial exhibits in the fairground's 4-H and Home Arts building, beginning at 8 a.m., before the morning program session begins.

The Maryland state fairground, site of this year's no-till conference, is located in the 2200 block of York Road in Timonium, north of Baltimore.

NY Cattlemen receive $30,000 to develop feeder cattle marketing program

JAMESTOWN, NY – The New York Beef Cattlemen's Association has been awarded an Agricultural Research and Development grant of $30,000 to develop and implement a statewide marketing program for feeder cattle.

Allen Peterson of Jamestown, president of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, said, "We are very pleased to be one of the 20 grant recipients under this new state program." More than 132 projects had been submitted by agricultural interests to the State Department of Agriculture and Markets for consideration of grant support.

The $600,000 grant program, proposed by the Governor and approved by the State legislature, is intended to stimulate the development and implementation of new and innovative marketing, production, processing and distributing technologies.

Peterson said the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association grant proposal was developed by Dan Fox and William Greene of Cornell, Peter Comerford of the Department of Agriculture and Markets, Peter Nixon, vice president of the state association and himself.

"The membership of our organization and the beef cattle industry we represent has been working for some time to develop a state-wide direct marketing program. This one-year grant of $30,000 will enable us to implement such as system for the fall 1986 marketing needs.

Van Dale unveils line of TMR tumble mixers

LONG LAKE, MN. – Orbit-Mixer™, a new high-capacity line of stainless steel tumble mixers for blending total mixed rations (TMR), has been introduced by Van Dale. The seven Orbit-Mixer models range from 26 to 245 cu. ft. total mixed ration capacity.

Van Dale engineers say, compared with conventional mixers, the new Orbit-Mixers are designed for increased accuracy, capacity, control, convenience, dependability, efficiency and life expectancy.

Orbit-Mixers have bolt-together construction and are easy to assemble and install in small areas. Their low-maintenance balanced-beam scale is easy to operate and extremely accurate; an electronic digital readout scale is optional.

Auger capacity is increased for maximum discharge capacity; a flow control adjustable from outside the mixer offers wide selection of discharge rates. Discharge is immediate.

With no need to stop and reverse the direction of a rotating drum, there is no stress from rotation reversal and the drive system is simpler, has fewer moving parts and requires less horsepower than other mixers of comparable capacity.

Crop residues: good for soil, water and profits

YORK — The Chesapeake Bay and Mason-Dixon Erosion Control Programs have highlighted the need for cost effective soil and water conservation measures. Crop residues, such as corn stover, wheat and straw play an important role in providing a readily available, cost effective way for farmers to build and conserve their soils while improving water quality, according to Lee B. Bentz, of the USDA's Soil Conservation Service, York.

Probably the most widely recognized value of crop residue is the protective blanket it provides to absorb the erosive forces of winter and early spring rains. The effectiveness of the residue is dependent on the uniformity with which it covers the soil, says Bentz.

As little as 1000 pounds of residue uniformly distributed over an acre can reduce soil losses dramatically when compared to the bare earth soil condition. However, advises the conservationist, the more residue left on the field, the greater the soil savings will be. Some typical crop residue values per acre are: 100 bushels corn - 7000 lbs.; 80 bushels barley - 6400 lbs., 60 bushel wheat and 100 bushel oats - 6000 lbs.

Residents also reduce run off and increase water infiltration as the per cent of surface cover increases. The resulting stored moisture directly benefits the succeeding crop and improves the quality of the waters leaving the farm.

Other benefits realized from the maintenance of crop residues include improving soil tilth and fertility. Residues increase soil aeration, water holding capacity, and permeability; maintains good soil structure and ease of tillage; reduce soil compaction and act as a storehouse for plant nutrients.

Purina opens ruminant nutrition lab

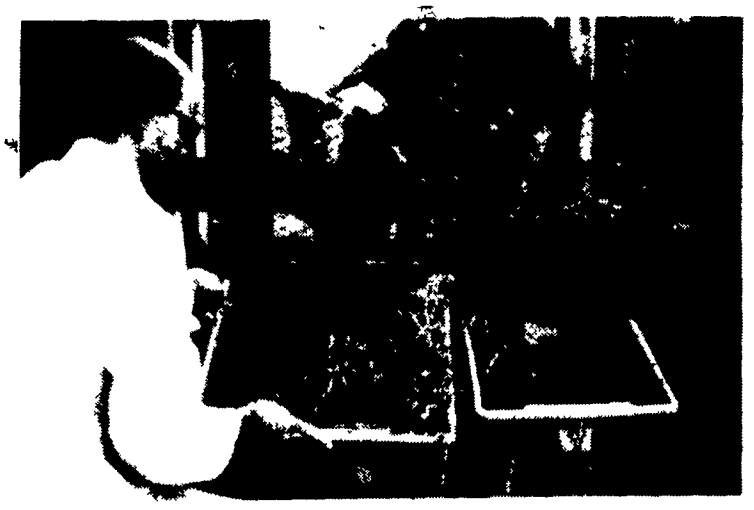
ST. LOUIS, MO – Dairy and beef cattle research, focusing on ways to increase meat and milk production on less feed, has been expanded greatly with the opening of a new large animal metabolism unit in Gray Summit, Mo., according to Dr. Daryle Greene, Purina Mills, Inc. Vice President and Director of Research and Veterinary Services.

The unit is part of Purina's Gray Summit Research Farm, already the site of extensive investigation into ruminant nutrition and productivity.

"Researchers will use this new facility to study ruminant nutrition, including the ways various types and amounts of roughages affect digestability and nutrient utilization," Greene explains. "With these expanded research capabilities, Purina researchers will be able to determine the anwers to more basic questions on rumen function and other issues confronting the dairy and beef cattle industries."

An enlarged biochemistry and microbiology laboratory will support studies to favorably influence the fermentation process in the rumen. "Changing the micro-environment of the rumen may stimulate digestive activity, enabling the animal to more fully utilize feedstuffs," explains Dr. Nate Smith, Purina Director of Ruminant Research.

"We will continue using cannulated and fistulated animals to study the fermentation process. By observing the digestive system in progress and determining digestion at various sites, we hope to learn more about nutrition partitioning, a real key in development of more efficient dairy and beef cattle feeding programs," Smith notes.



Dairy cows fed from small trays in which hay, silage and milking ration concentrates can be measured with accuracy.

Among other projects, Purina researchers will use "chewing rate studies" to evaluate particle size and composition of roughage-supplying ingredients. An electronic device will be fitted to the animal and connected to a computer monitor chewing rate. Purina hopes to use this information to establish a roughage index for ingredients used in dairy and beef rations says Smith.

In addition to beef and dairy cattle work, the new facilities are adaptable to metabolism studies with sheep and horses. Sheep can be used to test some exploratory concepts in ruminant nutrition and accelerate progress on certain projects. "The digestive system of the horse is unique and we hope to increase our understanding of nutritional needs of horses used as athletes," says Greene.

"Our goal for this new research facility is to help livestock owners gain full potential from their animals. This means testing to optimize the utilization of nutrients from feed ingredients and converting these nutrients most efficiently into the type of meat, milk or athletic activity desired by the consumer. We are dedicated to serving animal agriculture more effectively with these expanded research facilities," concludes Greene.

Yields, profits increased by impregnating fertilizer

CEDAR RAPIDS, IA -- Some farmers are improving both yields and profitability by applying fertilizer impregnated with herbicide. This is helping hold down input costs while they strive to get the most return for their money.

While the concept of impregnated fertilizer is not new, many farmers are just beginning to discover its advantages and benefits–especially when used on soybeans.

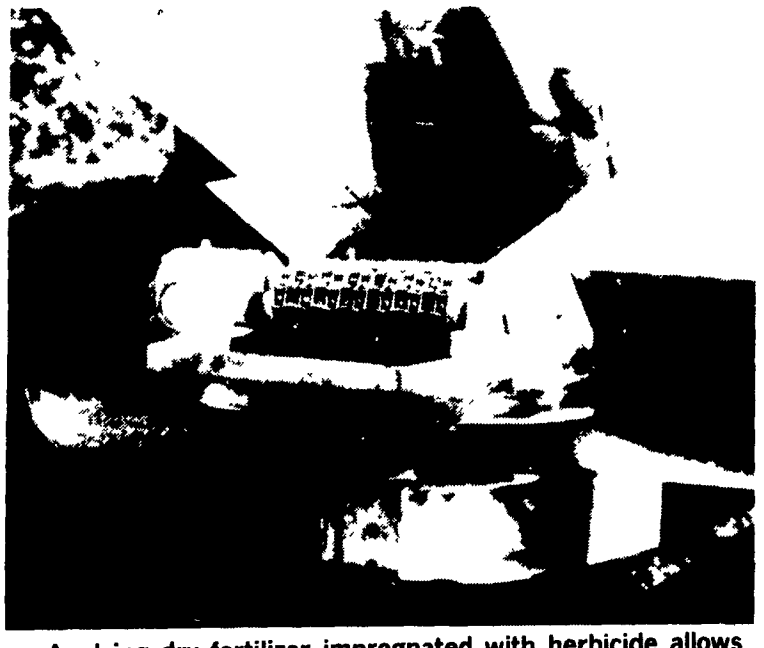
Jerry Klayer, of Klayer Custom Ag Service in Catlin, Illinois, explains. "Traditionally farmers who rotate corn and beans will load up on fertilizer for the corn and let excess nutrients carry over into the following crop of beans. Growers can spend less on corn by applying just what is needed for that single crop then coming back and fertilizing the following crop of beans with what the beans really need.

"The beans yield better with extra potash and lime and the farmer ends up spending the same amount on both crops as he would by applying high levels of fertilizer on corn alone," Klayer observes.

The increased yield more than covers the cost of the fertilizer usd on the soybeans. Klayer provides the following example that demonstrates the economics of applying herbicide impregnated fertilizer versus simply applying a herbicide alone on beans.

"An application of preemergence herbicide at three quarts per acre costs $14.87 plus $3.25 per acre for application, for a total of $18.12. That's just for weed control.

"We can apply Sonalan, a lower cost herbicide, at three pints per acre for $8.49 plus $5.25 for impregnation and application. We can add 100 pounds of potash and 100 pounds of pelletized lime for an additional $9.75. The total cost of the Sonalan impregnated fertilizer program is just $23.49," Klayer notes.



Applying dry fertilizer impregnated with herbicide allows farmers to weed and feed their soybean crop at the same time. Impregnated fertilizer fits in well with reduced tillage programs and helps improve yields.

The less expensive herbicide makes this program feasible. For about five dollars more per acre the farmer gets the benefit of excellent weed control plus the boost in yield provided by the fertilizer. The farmer only needs a one bushel per acre increase in yield to break even on costs.

According to Klayer, farmers in his area have experienced a yield increase of five to seven bushels per acre from this type of program. At $5.50 per bushel, an increase in yield of five bushels per acre would result in additional income of $27.50. That more than covers the cost of the fertilizer and the farmer wouldn't get that yield benefit by just using herbicide.

In addition to cost factors, many farmers are finding that impregnated fertilizer fits in well with conservation tillage programs. Many farmers have eliminated fall tillage and thus fall fertilization. With impregnation, fertilizer and herbicides can be custom applied in the spring with one pass using flotation equipment. The granular material sifts through crop residue well and the use of flotation equipment helps cut down on compaction.

Mike Mackie, Farm Center Manager for IMC in Williamsfield, Illinois, says that while growers in his area are concerned about cutting costs, many realize that the expense of making separate trips to apply fertilizer, lime, preplant and postemergence herbicides is higher than the cost of one complete custom application.

"Farmers are looking at the total input costs of herbicide and fertilizer application–equipment, upkeep and maintenance, breakdown concerns, time and convenience."

Both dealers believe there is a big future in impregnated fertilizer because farmers are concerned with maximum economic yield.

Agway hits sales record

SYRACUSE, NY – Despite a generally depressed farm economy, the top official of Agway Inc. reported near record sales, together with improved earnings for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1985.

Speaking to nearly 5,000 farmer-members from 12 states who attended the 21st Agway Annual Meeting, last month, in Syracuse. William A. Hiller, president and chief executive officer of the farm cooperative, reported consolidated sales just under $4.1 billion, down only slightly from last year's record. The sales volume includes three subsidiaries, Texas City Refining Inc., Curtice-Burns Inc., and H.P. Hood Inc., in addition to Agway's traditional farm supply businesses.

Hiller reported that consolidated after-tax earnings improved to $14.1 million compared with $11.8 million a year ago.

Sales volume for the agricultural businesses was reported at $1.6 billion...down from $1.7 billion a year ago. After-tax earnings of Agway Inc. and wholly-owned subsidiaries were 10.1 million...up from $8.4 million last year. The Agway leader reported the farm cooperative ended the year with a stronger balance sheet and a 3% improvement in reserves-to-asset ratios.

Holders of Agway securities received nearly $20 million in dividends and interest during the fiscal year. Net sales of Agway securities amounted to $31 million for the year bringing the total to $210 million. A new members-only IRA plan was announced for 1985-86, which will be offered in addition to Agway money market certificates, according to Hiller.

The Agway leader reported that each of the four business groups within Agway, Agri-Services, Energy, Food, and Financial Services, contributed to earnings during the year.

Feed tonnage was about even with last year, but dollar volume was down 20% due largely to sharply reduced grain prices. Fertilizer and lime tonnage was up and seed and chemical volume improved, but total dollar sales were down because of lower unit prices.

Agway Petroleum Corporation, a wholly-owned subsidiary, had one of its best years in some time despite industry-wide problems in the refining business. However, Texas City Refining, owned jointly by Agway and Southern States Cooperative, experienced a difficult year. The relationship between crude oil prices and refined product prices, together with the impact of foreign refined products were major factors affecting the TCR operating results, Hiller stated.

In the Food Group, Hiller reported that Curtice-Burns continues its profitable growth trend. H.P. Hood experienced a turnaround in the dairy division after the newly renovated fluid milk plant in Charleston went into full operation in December.

Agway's Financial Services Group also reported a good year. Telmark, a leasing company, is expanding into new territories. Agway recently acquired a property and casualty insurance company headquartered in Florida and now offers insurance products through independent agencies in nearly all states east of the Mississippi River. Hiller reported Agway Insurance will open a new regional office in Lexington, Kentucky, in November to serve 13 states in the Southeast.

Computers and specialized software packages for farmers are growth areas for the future, according to Hiller.

The farm leader acknowledged that farmers and agribusinesses which serve them continue to struggle in a financially depressed farm economy. He said dairy farmers face several years of continuing adjustments and stagnating prices before they see a return of a viable balance between supply and demand.

"At the end of the 1985 harvest season, we see an overabundance of nearly every commodity," Hiller stated. "These are serious problems that challenge the entire economic, social, and political fabric of our rural communities. Agway is involved on a day-to-day basis in seeking ways to improve the current agricultural situation."

Hiller stated that northeastern farmers are affected less dramatically than farmers in the midwest, but the farm crisis is having an impact.

Hiller stated that Agway is continuing to refine and improve methods of getting farm supplies and services to northeastern farmers in the most efficient and cost effective manner. He concluded his report by encouraging farmers to participate actively in their cooperatives in order to reap the full benefits of membership.

Harris releases catalog

LINCOLN, NB — Harris Technical Systems (HTS), the largest supplier of microcomputer software for agriculture, has released a new 40-page catalog of products for farmers and ranchers. Forty-four different software tools are included, ranging in price from $29.95 to $1495.00.

A unique selector guide is displayed with each product in the catalog to show buyers the computer experience needed to use the software (for many products, no experience is required) and, for management products, a "Management Horsepower Range" graph clearly indicates the power range over which the software can be operated.

In addition to HTS's own product line of AgDisk software, the catalog includes products from: Red Wing; AgriData Network; Doane's Financial Systems, Inc.; Monogram; Blue Chip; and DLM. Plus the catalog introduces a new product line under the title "AgDisk Professional".

Toll-free technical support from the experienced Harris staff is included with the price of each product. Specially priced "Trial Size" demonstration versions for fourteen for fourteen of the more expensive products are availiable so potentially interested users can "try before they buy."

Bob Harris, Chairman of HTS, commented: "This is truly a unique catalog. It brings together the best in agricultural software and makes it available all in one spot. Few rural computer dealers are able to stock substantial farm or ranch software, so it is difficult for interested on-farm buyers to find a place to "browse."

"Plus there seems to be three primary groups interested in agricultural computers and each of their software needs are different. There are pople who are just getting started with computers in their operation. They may not have even bought their hardware yet.

"Then there are those who own a micro and are looking for ways to make it more productive in their operation or want more uses for the whole family. Finally there are the enthusiasts who may want very powerful and complex software systems for their on-farm computer.

"This new Harris catalog has products for each of those groups. And with the product selector information, a buyer can be certain that the software will match their needs. Of course, all products are supplied with an absolute return guarantee if the buyer is not satisfied," continued Harris.

A free gift of an exclusive "I'm programmed to be more productive" T-shirt, or six diskettes, is sent with each order. The catalog includes other offers for free or specially priced software. All orders can be charged to Mastercard, VISA, or American Express credit cards.

Ag-Chem develops marking foam

MINNEAPOLIS, MN — Ag-Chem Equipment Co., Inc. introduces a new foam marking concentrate. Ag-Chem 80 to 1 foam provides twice the foam as other solutions using the same amount of water with half the foam concentrate.

This thick, dense foam, when properly mixed with water and agitated with air, shows up easily in fields — lets you spray fertilizers, herbicides, and pesticides without skips or overlaps.

And the 80 to 1 mixture remains dense without harming your skin or damaging the soil. The Ag-Chem 80 to 1 concentrate supplies 40 gallons of foam using only ½ gallon of concentrate with 40 gallons of water and has a softening agent pre-mixed with the concentrate.

ASA, DuPont sponsor Young Leader award

ST. LOUIS – Do you know a young soybean farmer – or young farm couple – who is emerging as a leader in service to the community and excels in farm management practices? This person may be eligible to become a 1986 ASA-LEXONE® Young Leader.

The Young Leader Program recognizes and honors young farm leaders in 26 major soybean-producing states. It is sponsored by the American Soybean Association (ASA), the state Soybean Associations and Du Pont Co. – makers of LEXONE® herbicide.

Joseph Dykes, state relations manager for the Soybean Association, says that nominations for the program are being accepted through Dec. 1. Nominees do not have to be Soybean Association members. State winners will be selected by a committee of soybean farmers appointed by the state Soybean Association.

Winners will be honored by their state Soybean Association, and receive an expense-paid trip for two to the 1986 Soybean EXPO in Cincinnati next July. In December, 1986, they will wrap up their year as LEXONE® Young Leaders with special leadership training at the Du Pont headquarters in Wilmington, Del.

The Soybean Association is a national association of soybean farmers established to improve the profitability of soybean production through market expansion, market-oriented research and education.

Du Pont is a leading crop chemical company. It is sponsoring the LEXONE® Young Leader Program for the third consecutive vear because it recognizes the value of young farm leaders to future development of agriculture in America.

For more information about the LEXONE® Young Leader Program, or how to nominate an individual, contact your state Soybean Association, or the American Soybean Association, P.O. Box 27300, St. Louis, MO 63141. Phone: 314/432-1600.

In 1985

To earn a dollar - give a dollars worth of service and work. Pay only $750 for the best kind of barn painting on an average barn - if you pay more you paid too much.

Being self-employed, enables me to take the time to properly apply my barn paint & sealer at prices below suggested retail cost. Proper application requires adjusting the viscosity of the paint to attain the best penetration and adhesion — thereby assuring you an excellent paint job.

The farmers in Lancaster Co. are lucky because of the amount of competition in barn painting.

Two attend conference

ST. LOUIS, MO – "Today's survivors and tomorrow's livestock industry leaders will be those who continue to think positively and ambitiously," says Tom Bowman of West Willow Farmers Assoc., Inc. in West Willow. Bowman and Sam Long just returned from Purina Mills' second National Farm Consultant Conference in St. Louis, last month, where maintaining a positive attitude in today's agricultural economy was a major topic of discussion.

"The livestock industry, as well as agribusiness in general, needs to produce and market its porducts more aggressively," says Long. "To do so, livestock producers must continue to learn about and utilize the most up-to-date feeding, management, and marketing techniques available. Agribusiness, in turn, must be able to provide that knowledge and service through consultants like us."

Toward that end, and to provide its network of more than 800 farm consultants with the latest information on swine, dairy, beef cattle and horse nutrition and production, Purina Mills sponsors this three-day national event. "The production techniques we've picked up from other farm consultants will also be valuable to the producers with whom we work," Bowman said.

While many of the farm consultants attending the national meeting discussed the problems they are facing in today's agricultural economy, they also expressed optimism for the future.

"We strongly support our Purina dealer organization by helping them select and train their farm consultants," says W.M. "Dub" Jones, president of Purina Mills. "These highly trained consultants are needed to serve the increasingly sophisticated needs of the nation's livestock producers. We're confident their number will continue to grow."

To maintain its reputation for high-quality, Purina encourages farm consultants pass a five-step certification program to increase the level of services they can offer livestock producers, Jones added. "To be certified, farm consultants must complete and pass a comprehensive study program in at least one area of livestock nutrition, health and management," he explained.

"We believe the efforts of our farm consultants like Tom and Sam reveal a positive attitude in agriculture. They, like a growing number of livestock producers, are looking ahead and working toward improved efficiency and future prosperity," Jones concludes.

DuPont tests new herbicide

WILMINGTON, DE – The Du Pont Company has announced that it is testing a new broadleaf herbicide, "Gemini". "Gemini" joins a growing list of new Du Pont herbicides now being tested for use in the soybean market. Others include "Classic", "Canopy" and "Assure".

Season-long control of cocklebur on light to medium soils is the strength of this new preemerge herbicide. In early testing "Gemini" has proven effective in control of cocklebur, morningglory, velvetleaf, Florida beggarweed, lambsquarters, pigweed, purslane, giant and common ragweed and sunflower. Early tests show it also controls many other tough broadleaf weeds and grasses including smartweed, prickly sida, jimsonweed, carpetweed, and Hemp sesbania.

"Gemini" appears to fit best in light to medium soils, where hard to control weeds infest soybean fields," says Fred Degiorgio, Du Pont product manager. "This new product offers unsurpassed, preemergence control of the toughest broadleaf weeds."

"Gemini" promises to be an important broadleaf herbicide for soybean growers. "It will have excellent application in minimum-till and no-till situations as well as in conventional soybeans. With this one product soybean growers will be able to get the same or improved weed control that previously required a preemerge and postemerge product--sometime several applications of a post herbicide," says Degiorgio.

Formulated as a dry flowable, "Gemini" will allow quick and clean spray tank mixing for ease of application.

Gemini was field tested extensively during the 1985 season. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) registration is pending.

Case introduces new designs for combines headers

RACINE, WI. – Case International is now rolling out a second generation of Axial-Flow combines, a revolutionary rotary design first introduced in 1977. The new 1600 Series machines offer higher horsepower, increased elevator capacity, a new feeder and header reverser, and numerous other features designed to enhance productivity and operator convenience.

A new 1000 Series of grain headers and corn heads will also be launched. A totally new design, these headers provide increased capacity and cutting speeds to match the larger combines.

Improved Performance

The 1600 Series includes four self-propelled units: Models 1620, 1460, 1660 and 1680. The 1620, 1660 and 1680 are also available in rice models. The 1600 series is complemented by the current production pull-type Model 1482 and the hillside Model 1470. The competitively priced Axial-Flow combines deliver higher efficiency and productivity.

Increased engine horsepower, larger grain elevators and increased concave area on the Models 1640, 1660 and 1680 enhance productivity and capacity.

Model	Horsepower	Grain Tank Capacity (bushels)
1620	124	125
1640	150	145
1660	180	180
1680	225	208

All models feature an increased cage separating area resulting in less sensitivity to changing crops or conditions.

Increased grain elevator capacity enhances productivity, especially in high yielding, high moisture crops such as early corn, green maize and rice. A new grain tank delivery system on 1660 rice and all 1680 models increases machine capacity and improves grain flow.

A new specialty rotor for rice and edible beans, available on all models, provides more uniform material flow, more complete threshing and increased capacity. The rotor can also be used in crops which are compatible with rice and edible beans.

Increased Convenience

The 1600 Series combines feature a new electric feeder and header reverser. When used in conjunction with the new auger lift reel on the 1000 Series headers, the reverser allows most feeder/header plugging to be cleared from the operator's seat.

When the reel is raised to its maximum height, the auger automatically begins to rise, increasing the clearance. The operator can then activate the reverser mechanism and clear slugs in the feeder or header. Hydraulic reel fore-and-aft control allows on-the-go reel adjustment.

Improved brakes reduce pedal effort 25 to 40 percent from earlier models. An upgraded cab features a repositioned air inlet filter, new large convex rectangular mirrors and a new unloader swing system for improved unloading visibility. New shaft speed and grain scan monitors enhance operator convenience.

New Case International 1600 Series Axial-Flow combines and 1000 Series grain headers and corn heads offer enhanced productivity and operator convenience. Pictured is the 180 horsepower (134 kW) Model 1660 with a Model 1010 rigid cutterbar header.

New mechanical suspension seats, with fore-and-aft, vertical and seat-tilt adjustments, are standard. An optional air suspension seat is available.

A backlighted right-hand console and headliner and six rectangular halogen lights including a flood lamp provide better visibility for night operation.

Advantages

In comparison to conventional cylinder and straw walker systems, the Axial-Flow combine provides greater grain retention, less grain damage, faster harvesting and easier servicing. The multiple threshing and separating action of the Axial-Flow, combined with centrifugal force, recovers a higher percentage of grain and eliminates straw walkers. Multiple passes over the threshing area provide more gentle threshing action with less crop damage.

Large rotors keep grain flowing quickly through the cage. Hydrostatic drive allows the operator to accurately select maximum operating speeds for all field and crop conditions. The streamlined design on the Axial-Flow combines means fewer parts to service, thus reducing downtime. Components are easily accessible to minimize daily service time.

Grain Headers

The new grain header line includes the Model 1010 rigid headers, Model 1015 windrow pickup headers and Model 1020 flexible cutterbar headers.

The entire line features a new, larger 23.6-inch (600mm) diameter floating auger that substantially increases header capacity. A new auger lift reel allows auger unplugging from the operator's seat. The manual fore-and-aft reel adjustment has been simplified using a crank mechanism. An optional hydraulic reel mechanism allows on-the-go reel adjustment.

plified adjustments. The Case International line now includes the industry's largest flexible header. Six sizes are offered ranging up to 30 feet in length.

Specially designed for use in windrows, the new 1015 pickup headers provide improved material flow from pickup to auger. A wider 154-inch pickup improves overall performance, especially in double swathed windrows.

For self-propelled combines, six sizes of rigid headers up to 30 feet in length and two sizes of pickup headers, 11 and 13 feet in length, are available.

Corn Heads

The durable, lightweight design of the 1000 Series corn heads provides high quality, fuel-efficient performance. Low-profile gathering units work close to the ground, for maximum effectiveness when stalks are down or tangled.

Deeper ear pockets and a slow-speed auger that prevents kick-out are among the yield-saving features of the corn heads. A tall corn attachment is now standard equipment.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT

When wet spots or other tough areas slow you down, a quick shift into four-wheel drive can make all the difference. And all it takes is a Power Front Axle option on your 2-135, 2-155 or 2-180 Field Boss® tractor.

4WD is not created equal. If you think all Power Front Axles are the same, look again. Most tractors use the engine as part of the structural frame. Adding four-wheel drive puts a lot of stress on the engine block. We think too much stress.

It's one reason why every Field Boss has a separate main frame casting. The engine is cradled inside it. Besides adding hundreds of pounds in working weight to the tractor, this separate main frame handles the extra stress of the four-wheel drive

Experience for yourself the quality and value built into our Power Front Axle. Proven with 24 years of on-farm use.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT

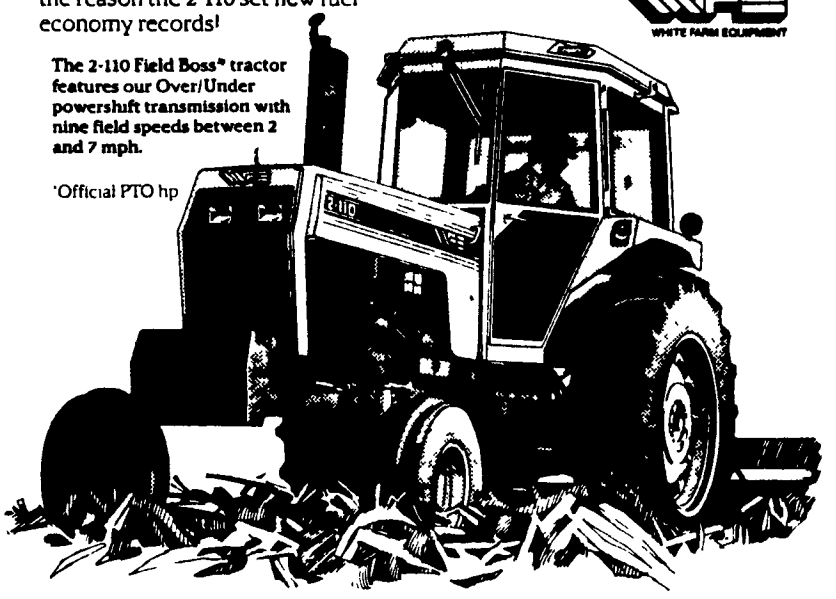
The 110.5 hp.* 2-110 Field Boss® tractor teams power, convenience and comfort with the best fuel economy in its class. That's a tough combination to beat!

Record setting efficiency. High performance three-ring pistons, unique intake and exhaust porting and an aspirator-type precleaner improve engine burning and air flow. Part of the reason the 2-110 set new fuel economy records!

Convenience and comfort. Our standard 3x6 Over/Under powershift transmission lets you shift on-the-go through three ranges in each of six forward gears. All shift and hydraulic levers are conveniently located on the right hand console.

Come in today and experience for yourself the quality and value built into every 2-110 Field Boss. You'll like what you see.

WHITE FARM EQUIPMENT



The 2-110 Field Boss® tractor features our Over/Under powershift transmission with nine field speeds between 2 and 7 mph.

Here's A Timely Tip...

Apply lime on frozen ground

Lime can be applied almost anytime, however winter months are ideal, because the ground is firm and the freezing and thawing action helps to disseminate the lime in the soil.

Senate bill would end writeoff for sodbusting

WASHINGTON – Iowa Senator Chuck Grassley has endorsed legislation to eliminate tax incentives prompting farmers to put highly erodible land into crop production.

Along with his colleague Senator David Boren, (D-Okla.), Grassley is promoting a measure to bar tax incentives for farm owners who utilize abusive "sodbusting" and "swampbusting" practices, which have brought millions of erosion-prone acres into production.

As of 1983, approximately 3.4 million acres of highly erodible land had been plowed and planted in the Central and Northern plains states, according to research conducted by Colorado State University. Estimates show that another 97.6 million acres of erodible grassland could be brought into production in the coming years.

The clearing and draining of wetlands, or swampbusting for crop production, is reported by Colorado State to have been the largest cause of wetland erosion between the mid-1950s and mid-1970s. Some 12 million acres of wetlands were drained and planted during this time period, the study reports.

Action taken in the Senate Farm Bill to discourage the cultivation of fragile lands unsuitable for intensive agricultural production have pleased Grassley, "but the job will not be finished until we also remove damaging tax incentives," he said.

He said in some areas, tax subsidies for plowing out fragile grasslands can amount to $175 per acre. For a high tax bracket operator who converts wetlands to cropland, Grassley said the tax subsidy can amount to more than $130 per acre.

Hoping to eliminate such incentives, the Sodbuster legislation would repeal tax deductions for the drainage and plowing of land that is highly erodible. It would disallow deductions or tax credits, including depreciation deductions, which are currently granted to those cultivating erosion-prone land. The law would not be applicable, however, if the cultivation of such land is done under an approved conservation system or if the land has been cultivated in the previous five years.
